COLLEGE HEADS JOIN IN MOVE TO WIN REVIEW OF DOOMED MEN'S CASE

Fifty-two members of the faculty of Mt. Holyoke College, exclusive girls' school at South Hadley, today petitioned Governor Fuller to intervene in behalf of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, confined in Dedham Jail awaiting execution. Mary E. Wooley, president of the college, heads the list of signers.

The petition urges Governor Fuller to appoint an unbiased commission to study the evidence in the South Braintree murder case, which resulted in the conviction of the two men. The petition asks that the findings of this commission be made public.

The appeal of the Mt. Holyoke college professors is only one of hundreds that are pouring in on the Governor. A majority of the petitions urge that the Governor take action to save the lives of the convicted slayers. But there are a large number of letters that ask the Governor to remain firm and to see that the mandates of the Norfolk Superior Court and the Massachusetts Supreme Court are carried out and that the man go to the electric chair the week of July 10, as ordained by Judge Webster Thayer, the trial justice.

$35 A WEEK FOR LOVING WOMAN, 66, HE CHARGES

The story of how he was paid $35 a week to make love to a woman twenty years older than himself was told by John Milton Heckman in Middlesex Probate Court today, where he is suing Mrs. Leora Marvin, sixty-year-old wealthy Cambridge widow, for $35,000. He once delivered groceries at her home.

The $35,000, Heckman charges, is the amount of a trust fund which his aged friend promised him if he would release her from her promise to marry him. Mrs. Marvin is the widow of Frank A. Marvin.

2-CENT GAS TAX AND $6 AUTO FEE BILL VOTED

The two-cent gasoline tax bill, with the automobile registration fee set at a flat rate of $6 for all vehicles, was reported favorably today by the Senate Ways and Means Committee.

Last week the House passed the bill, excepting that in the form it was passed the registration fee was set at a flat rate of $3.

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin appeared before the committee at a hearing yesterday, however, and protested the $3 fee, claiming that it was too low and would mean a loss of $2,000,000 in revenue annually.

The Registrar stated that under the present system of taxing car owners—registration fees of $10 or $15 or $20 or $25, according to the horsepower of the vehicle, and with no gasoline tax—the annual revenue is approximately $12,000,000.

Under the new bill, huge buses and trucks that now pay as high as $150 for registration, may be registered for the same price as the veriest, oldest, ague-bitten flivver—$6.

CITY HALL IN UPROAR AT THIRD FLOOR FIRE

City Hall was thrown into several kinds of compartiman excitement today when a fire started on the third floor, smoke filled the corridors and rooms and Mayor Nichols was rumored to have been overcome in the pungent clouds.

Employes of various departments, men and girls, choked away from their desks, fled the building, while the Mayor and his secretary, Edward J. Condon, took refuge in the press room where little smoke penetrated.

Starting in Room 57 among some engineering plans and other papers, the fire burned briskly, defying the efforts of Henry L. Wightman of Sackville street, Charlestown, to drown it out with a fire extinguisher.

The chemical in the extinguisher refused to spray out, so Wightman

TORNADO RAZES TOWNS IN 2 STATES; DEATH TOLL NOW 67; SCORES INJURED

At least 67 persons are known to have been killed in tornadoes that swept parts of Texas and Oklahoma, according to Associated Press reports from the devastated districts. Details are missing owing to disrupted lines of communication. Sixty-two were killed in Texas and five in Oklahoma.

San Antonio, Texas, April 13 (A.P.).—At least 62 dead and more than 150 injured were taken today from the ruins of Rock Springs, which was virtually wiped out last night by the worst tornado in the history of this section of Texas.

The town was lashed into ruins in a few minutes by a twister from the northeast which razed all except a few buildings.

Twenty of the injured, it is feared, will die.

Thirty-five bodies have been identified.

CARROLL COLLAPSES ON TRAIN GOING TO PRISON

Greenville, S. C., April 13 (A.P.)—Earl Carroll, theatrical producer, en route to the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, today collapsed on the train shortly before reaching here and was removed to a Greenville hospital.

Physicians examining Carroll said the collapse was not of a serious nature and that the producer regained consciousness before being removed to the hospital.

Marshal William P. Hecht, in charge of Carroll and other prisoners, said the removal was made as a precautionary measure because

The Mt. Holyoke petition was accompanied by a letter signed by Ella B. Talbot, a member of the faculty. The letter was written on stationery of the college Department of Philosophy and Psychology.

The letter and petition follow:

MT. HOLYOKE PETITION

"My Dear Gov. Fuller—Enclosed is a petition which was passed about for signatures at the regular meeting of the faculty of Mt. Holyoke College last evening. The petition is signed by fifty-two persons, which is a large majority of those who were present. Yours, with great respect,

"ELLEN B. TALBOT."

The petition reads as follows:

"Whereas, It is the belief of many citizens of the Commonwealth that the trial of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti did not establish beyond a reasonable doubt that they are guilty of the crime for which they have been sentenced to death, and,

"Whereas, The Supreme Court of Massachusetts in its recent decision was limited to questions of law and was not empowered to review the evidence of the case, we, the president and the following members of the faculty of Mt. Holyoke College respectfully request you to appoint a committee of impartial citizens to make a review of all the evidence that bears upon the question of the guilt of these men and to report their findings to the public."

Signed: Mary E. Woolley, president; Ella S. Dickinson, Ruth Reed, Alzada Comstock, E. C. Hinsdale, Beatrice Hyslop, Anna M. Star, Louisa S. Stevenson, Gertrude S. Hyde, Mary M. Wentworth, Helen R. The flood of petitions and letters, divided between those seeking clemency for Sacco and Vanzetti and those who wish the decisions of the court upheld, come from all over the country.

Edward E. Curtis, department of history, Wellesley College, requests investigation by a commission.

Other Sacco appeals today were:

The executive committee of the Social Problems Club of Columbia University urges executive clemency and appointment of an investigating commission.

From Berne, Switzerland, a cablegram from President Arthur Schmid of the Socialistic Faction of the Swiss Parliament, asking death sentence be commuted.

George Cooper, army and navy veteran of Harrisburg, Pa., asks a pardon for the men.

Prof. Edward N. Drown, Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, asks appointment of a commission.

A. N. Holcombe, Department of Government, Harvard, asks outright pardon.

Back Clemency Move

Various organizations and individuals asking for clemency or an impartial investigation of the case include:

International Brotherhood Welfare Association of Los Angeles; The Ladies' Garment Cutters' Union of New York; Los Angeles Central Labor Council; Workmen's Circle of Atlanta, Ga.; Central Labor Council, Portland, Ore.; Italian Dress and Waist Makers' Union, Local 89, New York; Pioneers of Labor, Boston.

Sacco Case Costs Norfolk County $53,576 to Date

The Sacco-Vanzetti case has cost Norfolk County $53,576.98 to date.

The only cheer for the Norfolk County tax-payers is derived from the fact that only $2638.80 has been expended so far this year—a bagatelle compared to the thousands spent in the seven preceding years.

The only expense to the county now is the cost of boarding Sacco and Vanzetti at Norfolk County Jail, pending their removal to the death house at Charlestown State Prison.

The expense, year by year, follows:

1921	$28,642.76
1922	8,802.71
1923	6,297.86
1924	4,695.18
1926	4,083.10
1926	2,729.90
1927	2638.80
Total	$53,576.98

HEAVY DEATH TOLL AS BIG STORMS SWEEP 2 STATES

Fire broke out soon after the storm roared by and the postoffice and a restaurant, two of the shells still withstanding the wind, were burned.

RELIEF WORKERS ON WAY.

Relief workers, including physicians and nurses from San Antonio and Kerrville and a detachment of troops from Fort Clark, were delayed in arriving on the scene with aid on account of storm damaged roads.

After the tornado passed two women, neighbors for many years, lay side by side. One on the verge of unconsciousness asked:

"Are you sleeping well?"

"I'll be sleeping in a minute."

She died with the last word and her companion lapsed into unconsciousness.

A severe electrical storm followed the tornado, hampering rescue work and adding to the suffering of the injured.

PHONE GIRL IS HEROINE.

All telephone lines to Rock Springs were severed when the tornado struck the town. A lineman succeeded in tapping a wire about a mile from community and sent the first call for aid.

The telephone lineman soon erected a temporary station and Gladys Lowery, the town's telephone operator, worked throughout the electrical storm to get relief calls through to nearby towns. Lightning forced Miss Lowery from the line several times and prevented a detailed report.

She said the tornado approached the town from the northeast and swept virtually everything before it as it cut a path about two miles wide.

FLOODS BALK RELIEF WORK.

Rescue work, disorganized immediately after the storm, was proceeding swiftly later today under a sun that warmed the chill of a norther. The dead had been removed from the debris and assembled at one of the two morgues. Some of the bodies, however, were mutilated beyond recognition.

The fire which for a time threatened to add to the tragedy, was finally halted by rain.

Although Rock Springs is only 120 miles west of here, it is an inland town in the heart of a grazing district and the nearest main line railroad points are from 60 to 70 miles distant.

Rescue parties were sent from Del Rio, 70 miles southwest from Uvalde, 50 miles south and from Kerrville, about the same distance east. A branch line runs from the Southern Pacific line at Uvalde to Camp Wood, within 20 miles of Rock Springs. The Red Cross train was routed through Uvalde to Camp Wood.

Flooded highways also caused delay. Forty automobiles loaded with supplies from Uvalde were turned back by a raging creek.

Five Are Killed as Tornado Rips Way Across Oklahoma

Oklahoma City, Okla., April 13 (A.P.). — Floods today threatened more damage to Oklahoma, where a series of tornadoes yesterday claimed at least five lives and injured a score of persons.

The most severe of four distinct tornadoes ripped through a section ten miles in length in eastern Oklahoma.

Killing men and a woman in Haskell and Leflore counties it jumped into Arkansas, where it took two more lives at Fort Smith. Scores of wrecked buildings marked its path across the Oklahoma-Arkansas border.

Three tornadoes were reported in Caddo county in northern Oklahoma. Several buildings were destroyed, but no one was known to have been killed.

Heavy rains accompanied the storms, to send the North Canadian, Cottonwood and Grand Rivers out of their banks. The streams had only started to recede after cloudbursts last week that caused heavy flood damage and in which a score of persons drowned.

Mountain Deflects Tornado That Kills 3 in Okla. Town

Muskogee, Okla., April 13 (A. P.)—A mountain apparently deflected a tornado from McCurtain, in eastern Oklahoma, where three persons were killed yesterday, F. H. Blackford, newspaper publisher of Stigler, who watched the whirling black cloud, said today:

"As it approached the mountain near McCurtain, it apparently gained momentum, hit the mountainside, then fell back," he said.

"It made another assault, both a third, before it reached the crest. As it struck, trees and housetops shot into the air. The mountain seemed to alter its course and it passed a short distance from McCurtain.

"The first house hit by the twister was that of John Ross, two and one-half miles from McCurtain. Mrs. Ross ran from the house, carrying a baby. She was hit in the face by a plank and died within a short time. The baby was severely injured.

"Mrs. Lucy Elliot, mother of Mrs. Ross, was lying on a bed when the house was swept away. The bed was blown from under her, leaving her uninjured. A man named Dozier was killed while walking along the road."

Blackford said that W. H. Whorton, living near McCurtain, tried to shield his wife's head with his hands when the tornado struck their home. A sharp rock nearly severed his thumb, but Mrs. Whorton was uninjured.

Baby Unhurt When Blown 50 Feet by Texas Tornado

Rock Springs, Tex., April 13 (A.P.)—During the disastrous tornado that swept this town of 800 persons last night, the usual sardonic pranks of the "twister" were in evidence.

A baby was hurled fifty feet through the air and landed safely, almost gently.

T. K. Newel, an automobile salesman, in the midst of the wind, rushed into the splintering Valentine Hotel to save whoever he might. He continued to extricate dying and wounded even after the hotel was in ruins.

Boy Admits Break

Ernest H. Ayer, 14 years old, pleaded guilty to breaking and entering and larceny in the Somerville District Court today. His case was continued until Saturday for disposition.

"A THOUSAND SHALL FALL AT THY SIDE . . . BUT IT SHALL NOT COME NIGH THEE"

"He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty," says the Psalm which, according to Mrs. Gray, expresses her thoughts. "A thousand shall fall at thy side," the seventh verse says, "and ten thousand at thy right hand; but it shall not come nigh thee." The ninth verse: "Because thou has made the Lord, which is my refuge, even the Most High, thy habitation." The photograph above is a reproduction of the extraordinarily moving painting, "The Conquerers." It shows Caesar, Attila, Napoleon and other great military leaders with the stark forms of the dead that fell for them [illegible] the path on either side.

"THE REWARD OF THE WICKED"

"Only with thine eyes shalt thou behold and see the reward of the wicked," reads the eighth verse of the Psalm. The painting shows the expulsion of Adam and Eve from Eden. Gray's attorneys have denied reports that he had been a Sunday school teacher.

CONFIDENT SHE WILL BE FREED BY JURY

New York, April 13 (I.N.S.).—Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder was one of several women "victimized" by Henry Judd Gray, a "male vamp of the worst type"—this will be the defense of Mrs. Snyder, who goes on trial with Gray Monday for the murder of her husband, Albert Snyder, it was revealed today by Edgar O. Hazleton, her counsel.

"That Mrs. Snyder was the motivating influence in this crime is absolutely untrue and it is also falsely said Gray was the innocent and misguided lover," declared Hazleton.

Confident of acquittal, according to jail attaches, Mrs. Snyder is looking forward to her trial with Gray with the real interest of one who is to view at close hand a murder trial for the first time.

She takes the position, say the jail officials, of one who has been given a ring-side seat for the sensational case, and who is merely an interested spectator.

She has told the attendants, they say, that she will place the blame for the terrible crime entirely on the shoulders of the man she once loved.

She will testify that Gray alone killed her husband.

She will say that he exercised a powerful influence over her and plotted the murder in order to obtain her husband's life insurance.

This is similar to the story that Gray tells about her. He claims that when she stroked his cheeks with the tips of her fingers that she hypnotized him, and it was in such a state that they planned the killing.

OLD MATE WON BACK BY EDNA W. HOPPER

New York, April 13 (A.P.).—After a separation of 13 years, Edna Wallace Hopper, 66-year-old "eternal flapper," has been reunited with A. O. Brown, who she married in 1903, and will leave for Europe on a "second honeymoon."

Miss Hopper and Brown had not seen each other since their separation until they met ten days ago at a party given by "a very dear friend" of both. Both denied they had been divorced.

"We will not resume where we left off," the former wife of De-Wolf Hopper said as she and Brown celebrated their reconciliation at a Broadway night club, "because we hated each other when we parted. We will begin all over again."

NEW HAVEN LANDLADIES GET $364,000 YALE CASH

New Haven, April 13 (A.P.).—New Haven landladies get $364,000 of the $3,314,000 that Yale students spend annually in this city, according to a survey recently made by the Bureau of Appointments. About three times as much goes to the restaurants of the city. The average expenditure of the 4000 students for clothing, laundry, books, amusements, and incidental expenses was found to be $400, a total of $1,600,000 going to the shopkeepers for these items.

The average expenditure of the undergraduates is placed at $1,800, for each of the four years in college. This was not divided equally, however, for while the sophomore and the junior reported expenditures of about the same amounts, the seniors found use for more money than members of any other class, while the freshmen were the lightest spenders.

COLDER TONIGHT WITH NO PROMISE OF RAIN

A drop in temperature hereabouts tonight is officially predicted to follow the eastward spread of an extensive area of high barometric pressure centered north of Minnesota.

The storm disturbance gathering force for several days in the southwest swept into southeast Texas early today, diverting possible rains from the fire-swept sections of the New England forest area.

ANGRY SUITOR TRAPPED HIM IN SCRANTON

Fitchburg, April 12.—It was the inevitable woman that tripped up Benjamin E. A. Marion, twenty-seven, alleged "brains" of an international swindling ring, Fitchburg police revealed today in telling the story of the man held in Fitchburg and wanted also in Boston and two dozen other cities.

Marion, who has been the most sought-after man in several countries for months, was ambushed by an amour in Scranton, Pa., after the youth from whom he stole the girl became enraged and tried to "get something on" Marion and win the girl back.

The enraged suitor came upon the picture of one "Walter Guest," wanted in Los Angeles, Cal., for defaulting $15,000 bail in a grand larceny case.

The picture bore such a striking resemblance to Marion, and the angered Lothario was so suspicious of Marion's lavish spending of money, that he went to the Scranton police and told them of the similarity between the picture and the face of the man who stole the girl.

Police took one look at Marion and seized him.

Marion is alleged to have mulcted an aged Fitchburg woman out of $15,000, all she owned in the world. She is now an object of charity.

In Boston he is wanted for swindling a Roxbury woman.

RAPID TRANSIT LINES PLAN REJECTED

The proposed rapid transit extension lines of the Boston Elevated, thought up by the Metropolitan Planning Division with an estimated cost of $35,000,000, were stepped on today by the Senate Ways and Means Committee, which reported adversely on the plan.

One rapid transit line suggested would have started at a terminus in East Boston, run west through the East Boston tunnel and a new subway from Devonshire street to Park, thence through the Tremont street subway, through and under Governor square and by surface to Harvard avenue and Lake street.

The second line was planned from beyond the North Cambridge station of the Boston & Maine via Somerville Junction, Lechmere square, viaduct, subway, to Broadway and Tremont stree, through a new tunnel to Back Bay station and via the New Haven tracks to Huntington avenue and Tremont street, Roxbury.

'BODY AND SOUL' DOCTOR IS TO BE HONORED

New York, April 13 (A.P.).—An aged doctor, whose work as a physician to "both body and soul" carried him from the obscurity of a Maine village to fame in the field of neurology, is to be honored by the New York members of the medical profession.

He is Dr. John George Gehring of Bethel, Me., formerly a successful Cleveland surgeon. Dr. Gehring, 79 years old, is now retired.

The board of trustees of the neurological institute of the medical center here have voted to dedicate a complete ward floor in the new building of the institute in honor of Dr. Gehring.

The Red Signal — The Gods Decide — By Homer Banks

HELEN IS PUZZLED—Helen replied carelessly: "Oh, she's just a friend." She realized, then, that she had made a mistake. But it was too late to rectify it after having cautioned Roger not to reveal Adelaide's identity. She recognized her position keenly, but if this was to be a true test of Rosalind's love for Roger, the outcome must lay in the lap of the gods.

ROSALIND'S LEAVETAKING—Helen's answer sealed Rosalind's determination to leave. A shaft of pain shot through her heart as she thought of Roger with this other girl. Their leavetaking was brief and formal, Rosalind, fighting to control her emotion, shook hands and promised to telephone Helen later. Helen gazed sorrowfully after the girl as she left the apartment. She realized that she had made a mistake out of a foolish impulse, yet she permitted Rosalind to go.

FACING THE FUTURE—That night Rosalind went back to her old room in the South End hotel that had held so many memories during the first year in the city. She gazed around curiously, shuddering at the shabbiness of the room. What did life hold in store for her now? Wearily, she crept into bed.

MANTON FINDS ROSALIND—Rosalind was awakened next morning by the ringing of the telephone. It was Samuel Manton. "I have been looking all night for you," her millionaire employer said. "I drove from Newport after I found you had gone. I just managed to trace you an hour ago. Why did you run away from me?" She dropped the receiver nervelessly. Roger's face rose before her mind's eye. Then she remembered the mysterious girl she had seen in his arms. Again she picked up the receiver. Manton was waiting patiently for an answer. UNIFRUITCO CLUB TO GIVE SHOW FRIDAY

The Unifruitco Club, of the United Fruit Company, will give its second annual show Friday evening, April 22, in Whitney Hall, Brookline. The club has chosen for its presentation, "29-East," a recent popular comedy.

Harlow C. Bosley, well known in dramatic circles, is directing the play and has chosen Catherine McGahan of Somerville and John Martin of Winthrop for the leads.

The supporting cast is Margaret Hallwood of Somerville, Anna McGrath of Lynn, Violet Loyte of Swampscott, Alice Robertson of Dorchester, Louise O'Hare of Brighton, Elma Spooner of Roslindale, Elsa Thurnd of Holbrook, Bernard Drury of Boston, Frank Caffrey of Boston, Richard Sullivan of Medford, Lucian Temple of Boston and Charles Laffie of Newton.

CAPE CHAMBER HONORS REAR ADMIRAL BOWLES

Hyannis, April 13.—Rear Admiral Francis T. Bowles, who for six years has been the president of the Cape Cod Chamber of Commerce, was chosen honorary president, in appreciation of his long and active service as its president since the organization was instituted.

WHEN ONE COP'S A CROWD

Leading players in one of the crises in "29-East," the comedy which the Unifruito Club of the United Fruit Co., will present at Whitney Hall, Brookline on April 22. Just what must a fellow do in a case like this?

FIRE MAY CURB HEIGHT OF N. Y. SKYSCRAPERS

New York, April 13 (A.P.).—City officials were pondering today the difficulties of fighting fires atop fireproof skyscrapers.

It was impossible to get water to a blazing wooden scaffolding atop the $16,000,000 38-story Sherry Netherlands apartment hotel, under construction at Fifth avenue and 59th street.

The scaffolding, 559 feet above ground, extended around a 15-story tower atop a 23-story main building. Firemen were helpless. They had to watch the fire burn itself out.

Fireproof construction apparently is all that is claimed for it, for only a temporary wooden structure was burned. Lack of elevators in the unfinished building prevented quick access to the blaze.

But the fire department leaders and other city officials in formal discussions suggested that it might be necessary to limit the height of buildings.

HAVE TO CLIMB STAIRS.

It is estimated 50,000 spectators in Central Park and nearby watched the scaffolding send sparks and giant embers flying over roofs in eight square blocks. The blaze resembled a giant Roman candle in the skies.

A water pipe burst on the 18th floor. Firemen climbed 24 flights of stairs with hose. But no water reached the flames, not even a trickle.

A 66-foot water tower, the highest in New York, was useless in trying to reach the blaze, and hose carried up through the Savoy-Plaza Hotel under construction across Fifty-ninth street from the Sherry-Netherlands, only sent a streak half-way across the street.

U. S. FLAG FLOATS HIGH.

For half an hour an American flag fluttered proudly from the brilliantly illuminated pinnacle of the building, but it disappeared as a gust of wind brought the flames scaling up the centre of the tower.

The fire was visible to hundreds of thousands of people throughout the city, along the New Jersey shore and on Long Island.

TWO KILLED IN GANG WAR IN PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, April 13 (A.P.).—An outbreak of gang warfare today took the lives of two men here. Edwin Callahan, thirty-four, was riddled with bullets from a "pump" gun as he stood on the running board of a speeding automobile about to fire at four pursuers in another machine.

The second victim, unidentified, was found propped against an entrance of Lankenau Hospital, and died a short time later from the effects of heavy blows on the head, dragged.

FIND SEDAN IN RIVER; DRAG RIVER FOR OCCUPANT

Auburn, Me., April 13 (A.P.).—A sedan which went through the railing of the bridge at Oakdale near here early this morning and plunged into 13 feet of water was pulled from the river early in the forenoon.

A coat lay on the back seat. Papers found indicated the car was owned by the Gemmer-Fenton Motors, Inc., of Portland. The driver was Gayland Bennett, an employe of the motor company, who was on his way to Portland, after demonstrating the car. The river is being staggered back through the smoke to the corridor where he met Assistant Engineer Arthur J. Short of Engine 13 and Ladderman Edward Powers of Ladder 8, both of whom were in City Hall on other business than fires—they thought.

The fire-trained powers of Powers and Short made short work of the blaze which is believed to have been started by a match or a cigarette.

A box alarm had been sounded, however, and School street soon was filled with clanging apparatus while hundreds of spectators gathered.

Firemen Short and Powers were somewhat choked up with smoke when relieved by their brother fighters, and Mayor Nichols complimented the two men for their quick work in drenching out the flames.

A note from the aviators read as follows: "Everything running fine. We will string it out for a new record. Daylight was very welcome. we stole occasional 'cat naps' during the night, but probably will be so tired that we will get some real sleep tonight. Our present engine revolutions are 1,225 per minute, and we estimate we have 170 gallons of gasoline left."

It was pointed out that the amount of gasoline consumed was slightly more than half the amount originally on board, but that the load on the plane was made much lighter by use of the gasoline, and that less gasoline would be required during the remainder of the flight.

At times Acosta and Chamberlain flew at from 900 to 800 feet to avoid low clouds.

he wished to take no chances with Carroll's health.

Atlanta, Ga., April 13 (A.P.).—The Atlanta Journal says today that Earl Carroll, New York theatrical producer, whose "bathtub" party in his theatre last year resulted in a sentence to the Federal Penitentiary here, will figure in another bathtub scene—that of orderly in the prison bathhouse.

The paper says Warden John W. Snook intimated that Carroll, on arrival here to serve a year and a day sentence for perjury, will be assigned to that duty. He will be eligible for parole after four months.

The Journal says Carroll's assignment to the bathhouse is "in accordance with the policy of assigning prisoners to duties for which they are best qualified."

GOODWIN GIVES WARNING ON AUTO LIGHTS

Warning that Motor Vehicle Register Frank A. Goodwin will conduct an official headlight inspection today followed the discovery that only twenty out of 2,000 machines whose lights were tested by the Boston Automobile Club had properly focussed lights.

The warning from Goodwin said that no leniency will be shown any motorist whose lights are found by inspectors to be defective and who has not taken the trouble to have them tested this week while the Automobile Club is giving free tests as part of its safety campaign.

Less than 2 per cent. of the machines examined Tuesday night in Dorchester avenue and Gaffney street were found to be properly focussed, but the majority of the defects were corrected and the drivers were issued stickers to display on the cars.

COUNTESS WINS SALM DIVORCE

Copyright, 1927, International Service.

Paris, April 13.—Countess Salm, the former Millicent Rogers, multi-millionaire American oil heiress, was granted a divorce today by the Seine Tribunal. At the same time the Tribunal granted a legal separation to Count Salm.

The count had asked the court for a separation and the countess had asked for a divorce. Therefore both petitions were granted.

The marriage of Millicent Rogers and Count Salm in New York three years ago was the culmination of one of the most sensational elopements in the history of the "400."

Right after the marriage, Colonel H. H. Rogers, Standard Oil magnate, made it plain that he would have nothing to do with his son-in-law.

The countess was gleeful over the outcome of the litigation.

"The best part of it all is that I get the custody of my boy, Peter," she said. "The agreement was that the count should see Peter every three months, so if the court allows this private agreement" to stand it means that I will have my boy."

The wish of the countess was gratified, for the court's judgment was that the agreement between the two parties, dated February 27, 1927, settled the question of the child's custody.

The countess backed up her accusation of "injurious relations" with a letter from Count Salm, in which he had written to her: "Because of the attitude of your family and yourself toward me, I wonder how I ever lived with you as long as I did. Luckily everything is now over between us."

The countess said that her marriage had taught her two lessons, not to marry hastily and not to marry a foreigner.

"If there is ever a 'next time,' I am sure that 'he' will be an American," declared the pretty young American heiress.

2 FACE COURT-MARTIAL AS DEVENS DESERTERS

Camp Devens, April 13.—Private Louis Eno, who was captured after he and Edward Delorey, a prisoner, had gone "over the hill," will face a general court-martial on three charges.

The men will be charged with desertion, with permitting a prisoner to escape and with the larceny of an automatic pistol, government property.

Rules of Movie

THE Boston American will publish twenty-four scenes (one a day) from different motion pictures. The face or head of one of the players in the picture will be missing. Fill in the coupon under the picture with the names of the missing player and of the picture.

Awards will be made to the seven persons who send in complete sets of the twenty-four scenes, naming correctly or most nearly correctly the missing players and the plays.

A contestant must write a short letter, giving the name of his or her favorite moving picture and why. The logic of this letter will be reckoned by the judges.

Employes of this and affiliated newspapers and persons affiliated with the moving picture business are barred from this competition.

The judges shall be named by the Managing Editor of this newspaper. Their decision shall be final.

Contestants may submit as many sets of answers as they wish.

Hold your pictures until the whole twenty-four have been printed. Then mail your answer and your letter to Contest Editor, Boston Evening American, P. O. Box 110, Boston Mass. All sets must be in the office of the Contest Editor before midnight, April 21. No sets will be returned.

INVESTIGATE BUILDING USED AS SOAP FACTORY

Whether a three-story wooden building used as a soap factory at Charles street and Charles street place, Charlestown, is a fire hazard will be determined by the City Council committee on public safety in response to an order recently passed by the City Council at the behest of Councillor Thomas H. Green of that section.

The building has already been investigated by Captain Michael Norton of the fire prevention division of the Boston fire department and Building Commissioner Louis K. Rourke.

SYMINGTON, CHIEF ACTOR IN LOVE SUIT, WEDS AGAIN

Baltimore, April 13 (A.P.).—Thomas H. Symington, wealthy manufacturer of Baltimore and New York, whose marital troubles were aired in his divorce suit against Ida May Symington in New York City and Maryland courts last year, was married today to Mrs. Edith R. Gaither of Baltimore, also a divorcee. The ceremony was performed at Ellicott City, Md., by the Rev. George W. Mylne, a Presbyterian minister.

HUB PASSENGER AIR LINE TO DISCONTINUE

America's first night air passenger line, in operation between the Boston Airport and Hadley Field, N. J., for the last ten days, will be discontinued temporarily at the end of the week after a most successful experimental period. Later in the Summer service will be resumed.

Announcement was made today by Colonial Air Transport, Inc., which has operated the night passenger service in connection with its mail contract service, that the big three-motor Fokker passenger plane will be taken from the night mail run and two new single motor planes will be substituted.

The passenger service was tried as an experiment when Colonial's single motor planes were destroyed in a hangar fire at Hadley Field. While single motor planes were being secured the big Fokker was placed in service and the passenger service was inaugurated.

According to District Manager Sumner Sewell, Boston people are anxious for a passenger air service that the Fokker is booked to capacity to the end of the week, and there are thirty-five reservations for night flights after Saturday night which cannot be filled.

Lack of a suitable landing field near New York that has easy access to New York proper, and lack of suitable landing space at the Boston airport are difficulties that will have to be overcome.

While the capacity of the big Fokker plane is ten passengers only six now can be taken as a maximum load, due to the lack of landing space at the airport for a plane the size of the Fokker with capacity load.

300 MILLION STEEL MERGER UNDER WAY

New York, April 13 (A.P.).—A $300,000,000 merger of four independent steel concerns is expected to follow the reported stock market coup executed in Republic Iron and Steel by Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland banker and steel magnate, the New York Herald-Tribune says today.

Eaton is chairman of the Trumbull Steel Company and a director of the Central Alloy Steel Corporation and of the Otis Steel Company. These concerns with Republic are involved in an amalgamation being sought by the Eaton interests, the newspaper asserts.

Eaton is reported to have bought his way into Republic so quietly that even the president of the company knew nothing of it.

Completion of the reported Eaton merger would make the concern third in size to the United States Steel Corporation and the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

Assets of Republic and the three firms with which Eaton is now identified are estimated at $299,963,946. After completion of the merger, the newspaper says, it is possible that amalgamation overtures may be made to Youngstown Sheet & Tube, holding assets of $295,471,626. Should this concern join the combine, total assets of the five firms would be $595,435,571, which compares with $617,174,856 for the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

Eaton, a Canadian who came to this country about seven years ago, is said to have made a fortune in Public Utilities.

Wife Admits Killing Mate After 'Chicken Dinner 3d Degree'

Newton, N. J., April 13 (A.P.).—Chicken dinners and kind words formed the novel "third degree" used by authorities here to induce Mrs. Sadie Raser, 42, of Sandy Stone township, to confess that she and her suitor, Frank Van Sickle, 27, a boarder, killed her husband 18 months ago.

Mrs. Raser was said by Prosecutor Vaughan to have confessed that she and Van Sickle had planned to slay her husband several months before his body was discovered in a woods near his home.

Frank Toscano of Washington street, Dorchester, was sentenced to State Prison by Judge Hugo Dubuque in Suffolk Superior Court for a term of three to five years for burning a building and defrauding an insurance company.

WIFE REPLACES TOWN 'CZAR'

Peru, April 13.—Mrs. Rose Smith today sits in state in the office of town clerk in this village in the Berkshires, while out in the open walks "Mayor" Frank G. Creamer, czar of the village, who for years and years gloried in the title of Town Clerk.

But in this year's election Mrs. Smith tied him. The vote stood 26 to 26 and the czar resigned because of the alleged shabby treatment of his fellow townsmen. Creamer, however, administered the oath of office to Mrs. Smith when he passed over the town records and seal.

LOVE PUT ON SALARY BASIS, SAYS MAN SUING WOMAN, 66

Mrs. Marvin was sued for $100,000 three years ago by Mrs. Flora Heck man, wife of the man who now charges her with breach of promise. Mrs. Heckman charged the aged widow had alienated her grocery-boy husband's affections. The case was settled out of court.

While a crowded courtroom gasped, Heck an, one of the few men ever to sue a woman for breach of promise in Massachusetts courts, told the story of his relations with Mrs. Marvin from the time he first started delivering groceries at her home in Cambridge. At that time he had been in this country only a year. He had come here from Riverport, N. S., when he was nineteen years old.

Q.—What were your duties? A.—Calling for orders in the morning, delivering in the afternoon.

Heckman, who is now forty-three, went on to relate the incidents of his love affair with the wealthy customer.

DECEMBER-MAY LOVE.

"For the first year I just called, took orders and then delivered the groceries," he said. "Then the second year Mrs. Marvin began inviting me to breakfast. That went on for some time until one day she asked me when I had my day off. I told her and she took me to the movies.

"We held hands and after the show she took me to a tailor shop and ordered a suit of clothes for me. She also bought me a silk shirt. It was the first I ever had. For a while while we used to hold hands when we were together; then one day she kissed me."

He then described how, Mrs. Marvin asked him to meet her on Huntington avenue one day. That was after they had kissed and embraced a few times.

"We met in Huntington avenue and then went to the Hotel Plaza in Columbus avenue. She went in the ladies' door and I went in the men's. We registered as man and wife," he said as he hung his head.

Q.—Where was she living at that time? A.—At No. 853 Massachusetts avenue.

Q.—And with whom was she living? A.—With her father, husband and son.

Q.—How old was the son? A.—He was about my age.

HOME FOR HIS WIFE.

The son referred to is Dr. Marvin who figured in a divorce action several years ago.

Then he met his future wife, he testified, and after a short while he married her. They were happy for a while, according to his testimony, and had two children, but Mrs. Marvin "kept after him." Finally she advised his moving his wife and family to Winchendon, so that he could stay in Cambridge alone, he said.

"She paid $1,000 on the house so that I could move them," he testified, "and then I stayed in Cambridge. Mrs. Marvin had a key to my room an we used to meet there often. I saw my wife and children only once in a few weeks."

A trip in which they visited the society resorts at Newport and Poland Springs was the next event of their relationship, he said. Mrs. Marvin made up a party of four and stopped at Portland, Me., Poland Springs, Providence and Newport, he testified. And then her husband died in 1920.

GOT $1,000 BILLS

But the years of his long friendship with the wealthy widow made Mrs. Heckman suspicious and she began to question him about their relations. Finally, she sued Mrs. Marvin for $100,000 charging alienation although Mrs. Marvin had bought presents for the children.

"She told me I had better divorce my wife," said Heckman. "She asked me to marry her many times and said she would help me get grounds for the divorce. She gave me three $1,000 bills at one time."

Q.—What did you do with the three $1,000 bills. A.—I put them in the bank.

He filed suit for divorce after Mrs. Marvin had seen her lawyers to handle the case and had arranged to pay all expenses. Mrs. Heckman's alienation suit was settled out of court and he won his decree. He charged his wife with unfaithfulness and gained custody of the children.

The decrees would not become final for six months and Mrs. Marvin made an arrangement with him to give him $35 a week until they could be married. But when time came so that they could tread the altar path she said she could not because of the publicity in connection with the alienation suit, and also because of her son's case.

"She told me her son would never stand for it," he said. "And when she said if I would let her off from her promise to marry me she would continue to give me $35 a week, I asked her how I could be sure of that and then she said she would establish a trust fund."

Educated in common schools, corresponding to grammar schools here, born in 1834, the former grocery clerk claims he was a hired sweetheart to Mrs. Marvin for years both before her husband died and after.

TWENTY SLAIN IN SHANGHAI BATTLE

Shanghai, China, April 13 (A.P.).—Chiang Kai-Shek's Cantonese troops today found themselves faced with fighting foes, both along the Yangtse battlefront and in Shanghai itself.

Northern forces, following up their recent successful advance, crossed the Yangtse to the south bank near Nanking, half way between Nanking and Shanghai.

They also have captured Pukow, opposite Nanking.

The Cantonese apparently are evacuating Chinkiang, on the Yangtse, forty-five miles northeast of Nanking. Most of the Cantonese officials have left Chinkiang and the Cantonese flag has been hauled down from the custom house.

At the same time the Red labor unions here, aroused by Chiang's attempts to suppress them, went on general strike. Fifty thousand men are idle and union leaders claim many more will follow.

TWENTY PICKETS SLAIN.

Disorders broke out in the native sections of the city. Two attacks were made on the defense barriers of the International settlement, although the leaders claim the strike is not of an anti-foreign character.

Paralding strikers attacked the headquarters of Chiang's troops in the Chapei native district. The soldiers fired, killing twenty of the attackers and repulsing the rest.

Official advices telling of the passing of the Yangtse by the northerners said that General Chang Sung-Li, Cantonese commander in that district, was fleeing toward Shanghai.

The fall of Pukow to the Northern armies means there are no Cantonese forces north of the Yangtse between Nanking and the mouth of the river.

Pukow was the last stand of the Cantonese in their retreat southward after two virtually unopposed advances northward from the Yangtse.

Prior to the entry into Pukow of the Northern forces the 27 foreign warships moved a mile up the Yangtse River to be out of direct line of fire between Nanking and Pukow, which are on opposite sides of the river.

GUNBOAT FIRED ON.

The British gunboat Woodcock, speeding down the Yangtse River from Hankow, was fired on by Chinese, presumably Nationalists. The Woodcock replied with machine guns and six-pounders. There were no British casualties.

A wireless from Hankow said an American gunboat, name not given, has brought to Hankow a group of Americans from Chunkging, and Ichang.

TEST CASE ON BANNED BOOK IS COMING

The book sleuths, latest wrinkle in Boston's bluecoats, today started a drive against "bootleggers," who are selling copies of "Elmer Gantry," the minister novel by Sinclair Lewis, ordered off the bookstore counters by District Attorney William J. Foley.

While the police, under orders from Superintendent Michael H. Crowley, are purging Boston of "Elmer Gantry" and other books allegedly immoral, the district attorney is awaiting a move by the publishers for a test case to determine whether or not "Elmer Gantry" should be banned.

The district attorney said today, however, that if other books were to be banned there would be no public announcement as in the case of "Elmer Gantry," because his office has no desire to be party to any publicity advertising scheme which makes a banned book sell in thousands of copies.

BIG RUSH FOR BOOKS

Since the ban was placed on "Elmer Gantry" more requests for the novel have been made in one hour than in an entire week before, according to several reputable book sellers today. However, the book stores are willing to abide by the district attorney's decision and have removed the book from their counters.

Their loss is the booklegger's gain, they said today. There is no difficulty in getting copies of the book in large quantities from other cities and outside the state. The booklegger has a shipment sent to him and merely carries them around under his arm making calls here and there. With the publicity given the book the supply is far less than the demand and it is said the walking delegates are "cleaning up."

"Elmer Gantry" was banned after it had been read by Assistant District Attorney William J. Sullivan, following a complaint made to Superintendent of Police Crowley.

RELIGION NOT CRITICIZED.

The novel deals with the moral weaknesses of a Baptist minister, although the clergy of various Protestant denominations as well as of the Catholic church figure in its pages. There is no studied criticism in it of any religious sect.

In his notice to the booksellers' committee Mr. Foley asserted that "evidences that the book is sold or offered within the confines of Suffolk County will be followed by prompt action by this office."

Though the District Attorney's ban is effective throughout Suffolk County, it still is comparatively easy for those who wish to purchase any of these books.

In case any of these books are carried in Cambridge stores, residents of Boston could cross the river and make their purchases, as the District Attorney of Suffolk has no jurisdiction there. This holds good, also, in surrounding cities and towns such as Lynn, Lawrence, etc., not in Suffolk County.

CAN BE ORDERED DIRECT.

Likewise any of these books can be ordered direct from the publisher in New York and sent into Boston to the purchasers' addresses.

As a sequel to the ban on "Elmer Gantry," the booksellers' committee today delivers to the District Attorney 57 other books which are as frank in treatment as the work by Sinclair Lewis.

Lawrence, April 13 (A.P.).—Frank Balevicz, twenty-two, of Haverhill, a hopeless cripple, was awarded $23,000 in his suit in Superior Civil Court today against Benjamin Grad of Haverhill, on the grounds that a defective gate leading to an elevator well in a building in Haverhill was the cause of him falling five stories.

His father, Paul, was given $2,500 in damages. The accident occurred in 1924.

DRAPER MERGER EFFECTED BY PRINCESS

Hopedale, April 13 (A.P.).—The expected merger of the Draper corporation of this place and the Hopedale Manufacturing Company of Milford, which has been pending for some time, has been completed, B. H. Bristow Draper, treasurer of the Draper Corporation, announces.

The transaction brings about the restoration of business relations between two branches of the Draper family which were interrupted about 20 years ago.

Plans for the future of the Milford plant have not developed, as definite decision of the Draper corporation to acquire the Hopedale company has only recently been reached.

The family reconciliation which has resulted in the merger of the two big industrial plants was brought about by the Princess Boncompagni, formerly Margaret P. Draper, beloved by everyone in the Milford-Hopedale district.

The Princess is the daughter of the late General William F. Draper of Civil War fame who in 1898 broke away from his brothers, after a family quarrel, and established the Hopedale plant. The rift in the family relations grieved the Princess and recently she made overtures to her cousins. There were a series of dinner parties, old wounds were healed and the complete reconciliation was finally effected.

OPEN GRAVE WHEN GIRL DREAMS CORPSE IS COLD

Chicopee, April 13 (A.P.).—In order to silence widespread rumors that the grave of his wife, Tekla Janli, has been robbed of the valuable art leather casket in which she was buried last November, John F. Janlic, merchant, will go to St. Stanislaus' Cemetery today, accompanied by Rev. Lawrence M. Cyman, his pastor, and Adam Ostrowski, undertaker, and open the grave.

Circulated reports have it that the idea the grave had been robbed originated from a dream of Janlic's daughter, to whom the dead mother is said to have appeared, moaning that she was cold.

Then you may step out confidently in this Oxford (3113) of black Russia with its chic trimming of black pigoat. Also in tan, both $12.50. Or choose, if you will, the pump above (4284) in tan Russia, at $8. Also in gray and parchment. And don't fail to visit the Hosiery Counter, where all the new spring shades are represented.

If you are addicted to Easter presents, remember that 3 pairs of our regular $1.95 silk stockings cost but $5. For men, see the new display of imported golf stockings.

The gentleman of the house will hold his own in any style parade with "Clarendon" on his foot. In black or tan calf, medium weight, $10.

The younger generation demands style to-day, and gets it in the patent leather slipper (6324a) with its dainty simulated lizard strap. From $4 to $8.50, in children's to misses' sizes. Or the beige goatskin tie (5363a) is smart, indeed, $5.50 to $9. It comes also in patent leather. And at the Children's Shop on the third floor you will find a gay assortment of hosiery in the new patterns and spring colours. Prices from 50 cents up.

Prof. Frankfurter Calls Alibi of Sacco Overwhelming

By FELIX FRANKFURTER.
Chapter V.

As to Vanzetti:

The Commonwealth offered two witnesses who claimed to identify Vanzetti as an occupant of the murder car. One, Dolbeare, claimed to have seen him hours before the murder, leaving only LeVangie, who claimed to have seen him on the spot.

Harry E. Dolbeare testified that somewhere between 10 and 12 a. m. he saw a car going past him in South Braintree with five people in it, one of whom he identified as Vanzetti.

They appeared strange to him, as a carload of foreigners. "I felt it was a tough looking bunch. That is the very feeling that came to my mind at the time. That is all I recall now."

Q.—And it is nothing unusual to see an automobile with three or five or seven foreigners in it, is it? A.—No.

He cannot give any description of the men who were on the front seat of the automobile. He did not take any particular notice of them. "This one man attracted my attention."

There is nothing other than what he has already given by which he characterizes these men as a tough looking bunch. He does not know whether the other two men who sat on the back seat had mustaches or beards of any kind.

He does not know what kind of a hat or cap the man in the middle, who leaned forward to speak, wore. He does not know whether this man had a cap with a visor projecting out or whether he had on a slouch hat.

LeVangie, the gate tender of the New Haven railroad, was on duty at the South Braintree grade crossing on the day of the murder. According to his testimony, the murder car drove up to the crossing just as he was lowering the gate, and a man inside forced him at the point of a revolver to let the car through before the advancing train.

AS THE DRIVER

LeVangie identified Vanzetti as the man who was driving the car. LeVangie's testimony was discredited by the testimony of McCarthy, a locomotive fireman of the New Haven, who testified that three-quarters of an hour after the murder he had a conversation with LeVangie.

I asked him if he knew them. He said, no, he did not. I asked him if he would know them again if he saw them. He said "No." He said all he could see was the gun and he ducked.

Moreover, LeVangie was discredited by all the other identification witnesses on both sides, who insisted that the driver of the car was a young, small, light-haired man, whereas, Vanzetti was middle-aged, dark, with a black moustache.

But, though the District Attorney had to repudiate LeVangie, he characteristically held on to LeVangie's identification. The following quotation from the District Attorney's summing up reveals the worthlessness of LeVangie's testimony: it throws no less light on the guiding attitude of the prosecution:

They find fault, gentlemen, with LeVangie. They say that LeVangie is wrong in saying that Vanzetti was driving that car. I agree with them, gentlemen. I would not be trying to do justice to these defendants if I pretended that personally so far as you are concerned about my personal belief on that, that Vanzetti drove the car over the crossing.

I do not believe any such thing. You must be overwhelmed with the testimony that when the car started it was driven by the light haired man who showed every indication of being sickly.

We cannot invalid the testimony of witnesses, gentlemen. We have got to take them as they testify on their oath, and we put LeVangie on because necessarily he must have been there. He saw something. He described a light haired man to some of the witnesses.

They produced Carter, the first witness they put on, to say that he said the light haired man—the driver was a light haired man. That is true. I believe my brothers will agree with me on that proposition, but he saw the face of Vanzetti in that car, and is his testimony to be rejected if it disagrees with everybody else if you are satisfied he honestly meant to tell the truth?

And can't you reconcile it with the possibility, no, the likelihood or more than that, the probability that at that time Vanzetti was directly behind the driver in the quick glance this man LeVangie had of the car going over when they were going up over the crossing.

Right or wrong, we have to take it as it is. And I agree if it depends on the accuracy of the statement that Vanzetti was driving, then it isn't right, because I would have to reject personally the testimony of witnesses for the defense as well as for the Commonwealth who testified to the contrary.

I ask you to find as a matter of common sense he was, in the light of other witnesses, in the car, and if on the left side that he may well have been immediately behind the driver.

In other words, obliged to repudiate the testimony of LeVangie that Vanzetti was on the front seat, the Commonwealth urged the jury to find that although LeVangie said that Vanzetti was on the front seat, he meant he was on the back seat. At the time that he offered this testimony of LeVangie, the district attorney had held interviews with, and had in his possession written statements of, the only two persons who had an extended opportunity to observe the driver of the car.

NOT AT TRIAL

The detailed description given by them absolutely excluded Vanzetti. (Kelly and Kennedy affidavits.) The reliability of these observers and of their statements has not been challenged. Yet they were not called by the district attorney; instead he called LeVangie.

Unfortunately, the existence of Kelly and Kennedy was until very recently unknown to the defense and, of course, therefore, their testimony was unavailable for Sacco and Vanzetti at the trial.

The alibi for Vanzetti was overwhelming. Thirty-one eyewitnesses testified positively that no one of the men that they saw in the murder car was Vanzetti. Thirteen witnesses either testified directly that Vanzetti was in Plymouth selling fish on the day of the murder, or furnished corroboration of such testimony.

What is the worth of identification testimony even when uncontradicted? The identification of strangers is proverbially untrustworthy. The hazards of such testimony are established by a formidable number of instances in the records of English and American trials.

Since 1908, in sixteen cases the English Court of Criminal Appeals quashed convictions because of the insufficiency of identification. Similarly, in capital cases alone, the inadequacy of identification testimony has five times since 1914 led the New York Court of Appeals to reverse convictions.

CALLS IT FARCE

In the Sacco-Vanzetti case the elements of uncertainty were intensified. All the identifying witnesses were speaking from casual observation of men they had never seen before, men of foreign race, under circumstances of unusual confusion.

Thus one witness, Cole, "thought at the first glance that Vanzetti was a Portuguese fellow named Tony that he knew." Afterward he was sure the man was Vanzetti.

The methods pursued by the police in eliciting identification in the case fatally impair its worth. In England, such methods would have discredited the testimony and nullified a verdict based upon it. The recognized procedure is to line up the suspect with others, and so far as possible with individuals of the same race and class, so as not to provoke identification through accentuation.

In defiance of these necessary safeguards, Sacco and Vanzetti after their arrest were shown singly to persons brought there for the purpose of identification, not as part of a "parade." Moreover, Sacco and Vanzetti were not even allowed to be their natural selves; they were compelled to simulate the behavior of the Braintree bandits. Under such conditions identification of foreigners is a farce.

To anticipate our story after the conviction Judge Thayer himself abandoned the identification of Sacco and Vanzetti as the ground on which the jury's verdict rested.

JUDGE'S RULING

In denying a motion for a new trial, based on the discovery of a new eyewitness with better opportunities for observation than any of the other witnesses on either side, who in his affidavit swore that Sacco was not the man in the car, Judge Thayer ruled that this evidence would simply mean one more piece of evidence of the same kind and directed to the same end, and in my judgment would have no effect whatever upon the verdicts. For these verdicts did not rest, in my judgment, upon the testimony of the eye witnesses, for the defendants, as it was, called more witnesses than the Commonwealth who testified that neither of the defendants were in the bandit car.

The evidence that convicted these defendants was circumstantial and was evidence that is known in law as "consciousness of guilt."

To this "consciousness of guilt" we shall now address ourselves.

B. U. STUDENTS IN PLEA FOR FREE CHINA

An exact parallel of the situation in America that brought on the Revolution for freedom, is the situation in China today and the Chinese should be left to settle the problem, a group of Boston University theological students declared today.

In a letter to the Boston Evening American signed by seventy-nine students, it was warned that other than a friendly attitude on the part of this government will result in destruction of U. S. trade with China and will do irreparable harm to American interests there.

"In dealing with the Chinese," the letter said, "we do well to remember that we are dealing with 400,000,000 people, or more than one-fifth of the entire population of the globe.

"We in the past have stood for liberty. All the Chinese want is liberty. Shall we not stand shoulder to shoulder with them in this crisis?

"The citizens of New England recall that the Boston Tea Party and, in part, the Revolutionary War, were caused by the economic injustice of a tax without representation.

"In demanding the restoration of customs autonomy, China is merely asserting her right to determine the tax upon her own export and import trade.

JAIL GUARDS IN STEPHENSON PLOT FIRED

Michigan City, Ind., April 13 (A.P.)—Connivance with D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan, who now is serving a life sentence for the murder of Miss Madge Oberholtzer of Indianapolis, has led to the discharge of three State guards.

One of the guards was dismissed some time ago, Warden Walter Dale said, and two others more recently. Each admitted, the warden said, that he had carried from the prison letters Stephenson had intrusted to him for delivery to persons outside.

The Stephenson letters, the warden indicated, directed friends of the ex-grandom klan chief in their efforts to bring about his release from imprisonment. The warden said he had been unable to substantiate reports that the letters also had to do with a plot against some persons outside the prison.

SQUIRE AND COMPANY'S AD WINS AWARD

The advertisement of John P. Squire & Company of Boston on Squire's Arlington Ham won the highest award in the second week's competition of the Prize Review of Current Advertising, conducted by the Boston Evening American and sponsored by the Advertising Club of Boston.

This decision of the Board of Judges is based on a consideration of all the advertising appearing in the Boston Evening American during the week ending Saturday, April 9. During the first week's competition, another advertisement of John P. Squire and Company was awarded honorable mention.

This week's winning advertisement issues from Eugene M. McSweeney Company advertising counselors, No. 100 Milk street, Boston. It was prepared in the office of that agency in conjunction with an extensive and carefully organized advertising campaign planned jointly by D. W. Creedon, general manager, Everett M. Dickenson, advertising manager of the Squire Company, and Eugene M. McSweeney, head of the McSweeney Company.

John P. Squire and Company, although a long-established concern, is comparatively a newcomer among large users of metropolitan newspaper space, never having employed metropolitan newspaper advertising on a large scale before. The officials were stimulated to launch the present campaign by their wholehearted approval and support of the movement for boosting New England, an endeavor in which they believe every New England industry should be actively co-operative.

Their renewed sales-effort in these advertisements was so planned as to interlock with the aims of the New England Council in creating nation-wide consciousness of New England products and standards.

"Of course we were both surprised and pleased over having our advertisement win the second week's prize in the Boston Evening American's Prize Review of Current Advertising," said Mr. McSweeney, who insisted that the credit for planning the advertising campaign should go to Mr. Creedon and Mr. Dickenson of the Squire Company.

"I am sure that to have an honorable mention for an attractive advertisement one week and a winner the next, is particularly pleasing to the Squire people," he continued, "especially in view of the fact that this concern has never used metropolitan newspaper advertising on a great scale before, and that it is a part of the concern's plan to help New England, its people and its products.

"The advertising campaign of the Squire Company is a part of the plan to let New England people know what the big industries are doing toward boosting New England and its products."

In awarding its prize to Squire the judges were particularly impressed with its appropriateness in the advertisement to the time and spirit of the season. It illustrates an intelligent use of white space and the principles of typography. The illustration, in addition to being well placed, is executed in a technique that lends itself especially well to newspaper production. It has a certain cleanliness and uncrowded aspect that stamps it as convincing.

Such were the reasons advanced by the judges in making their decision. The Squire advertisement was closely pressed for first honors by six other advertisements, all of which came in for high commendation. These six were awarded honorable mention. A reproduction of these "runners up" will be shown in the Boston Evening American.

Interest in the novel competition, the first of its kind to be conducted by any newspaper, mounts higher with each week of the "Review." The competition is now in its third week. All ads in today's paper, as well as in every day's paper this week, are being reviewed by the Board of Judges to determine the next winner. This will be the advertisement adjudged the best appearing in the Boston Evening American for the week ending Saturday, April 16.

The Prize Review of Current Advertising enjoys the support of public officials, business men, educators and professional people throughout New England. Its purpose is to stimulate the production of better and more resultful advertising and thus to bring more business, more activity, more employment to New England.

"The Boston Evening American cannot be given too much praise for launching its Prize Review of Current Advertising," said Mr. McSweeney. "It is the first time that such a contest has been conducted by any Boston newspaper. It is novel and should appeal to the friendly rivalry of advertising men and all who use advertising.

"While the prize that is given the winner each week—a receipted bill covering the cost of the advertisement, is well worth while, there is a lot of satisfaction in having one's advertisement declared the best by a board of judges who are experts in advertising."

BRITAIN TO LET GIRLS, 21, VOTE

London, April 13 (A.P.).—Premier Baldwin announced in Commons today that the government will introduce a bill at the next session of Parliament to give women the vote at 21, thus equalizing their franchise with that of the men.

Suffragists who won this concession after a long campaign ridicule the outcry against "flapper vote" which has been raised by opponents. They declare short skirts have nothing to do with loyalty or brains.

Dame Millicent Fawcett, writer and noted suffragist, told the Evening Standard today girls of 21 are more intelligent than men of that age. She even envisaged the possibility of a Cabinet including a considerable proportion of women.

Ellen Wilkinson, Laborite Member of Parliament, said: "People always think of flappers when the subject of votes for women at 21 is mentioned. This measure will enfranchise a great many responsible professional women."

PROVIDENCE BOY NEAR DEATH IN EXPLOSION

Providence, April 13.—John Di Gregorio, 11 years old, is battling for life in Rhode Island Hospital against injuries he received in a hot-air explosion in the shoe shop of Arting, Cenci on Douglas avenue.

The tank blew out with a blast that threw young Di Gregorio through the door, and hurtled the proprietor and another boy, Louis Richio, to the floor. Di Gregorio is suffering from internal injuries.

Brook Full of Trout Where Coolidge Found None

Plymouth Notch, Vt., April 13.—President Coolidge had only himself to blame for his poor trout luck during his vacation last year, State fisheries experts have ascertained by an official count of a stream.

The chief executive angled all day for nary a trout, but the fisheries experts counted 800 to the mile. The brook has been identified as a stream within walking distance of the Coolidge farm.

The census was made by an actual count of the fish that could be seen in clear, shallow water. With additional stocking, the President ought to find more than 1,000 to the mile this year.

MOTHER, SON, DIE IN CRASH

Sheffield, April 13 (A.P.).—Mrs. Leroy Teator of this town and her 12-year-old son, Robert, were killed today when their automobile was struck by a freight train at a grade crossing.

She had just delivered milk from her farm to a creamery station and had started home.

Richard B. McSweeney, parole clerk at Concord Reformatory, was today appointed as the first probation officer for the United States District Court. He will receive $3,400 a year.

NAB 6 IN HUGE BANK SWINDLE

Harrisburg, Pa., April 13 (A.P.).—Six men were arrested today in connection with the embezzlement of $500,000 from the Commonwealth Trust Company of this city.

Those under arrest, in addition to A. S. Banmiller, assistant treasurer of the bank, who has been in jail since March 7 are Charles A. Delong, treasurer of a drug store; E. J. Clancy, treasurer of the bank; James A. McLaughlin, assistant treasurer; Jacob Garman, teller; Frank S. Brinton, general bookkeeper, and Carl Cross, clerk.

Twenty Die in Spain Storm

Madrid, April 13 (I.N.S.).—Enormous damage has been done along the coast near Albucemas and 20 sailors have been drowned during a cyclone.

So easy to prevent body odor now

[Just wash and bathe with this toilet soap that purifies pores]

HOW strange it is that we can instantly detect the faintest hint of body odor in others, yet never realize that we ourselves are often just as guilty!

There is never a time when we all do not need to be on guard against the danger of offending. For science proves that even in cool weather the pores continually give off quantities of odor-causing moisture.

But why risk body odor when it's so easy to be safe? No extra trouble—just use Lifebuoy. Lifebuoy is so refreshing that millions bathe with it every day. It purifies pores — gives lasting freedom from body odor.

Those suffering from odor due to underarm perspiration or perspiring feet will especially welcome the purifying action of Lifebuoy's antiseptic lather.

Change toilet soaps —and see!

Wonderful for complexion

Countless men and women declare they will use nothing but Lifebuoy—just because it is so delightfully mild and soothing to the skin, yet so invigorating. Its pure bland oils are marvelous for keeping the complexion smooth and clear.

And more important still, Lifebuoy's penetrating, antiseptic lather removes germs from hands as well as dirt—helps protect you and your family against the 27 germ diseases which, according to the Life Extension Institute, may be carried into your home by hands.

A hygienic scent that millions love

Lifebuoy is so different from other toilet and bath soaps that even its scent is different. Not a perfume, but a clean, pleasantly hygienic scent which tells you Lifebuoy gives greater protection.

Even before you've finished your first cake, you'll learn to love this cleanest of all soap scents, which quickly evaporates after rinsing.

Without its antiseptic, Lifebuoy would still be a wonderful toilet soap—but you wouldn't get the added protection.

Added safety—no extra cost

Lifebuoy assures greater health protection, and freedom from body odor—yet costs no more, probably less, than the toilet soap you now use. Lifebuoy is orange-red, the color of its pure palm-fruit oils. You can get it wherever soap is sold.

GOODYEAR TIRE RECORD SET

"The World's Greatest Tire," as the Goodyear company designated its new All-Weather tire, recently launched, has already passed far beyond the million mark in sales, President F. W. Litchfield announced today.

"The acceptance of the new tire was very gratifying," he said. "The first public announcement of the tire was made January 6 through the newspapers and one magazine, and already more than one million of these tires have been sold.

"It is without precedent, and is a tribute to the high quality built into the tire and to the power of newspaper advertising.

"The result is comparable to the public acceptance of the Goodyear Cord tire ten years ago. Yet it took two years for the public definitely to accept the cord tire as a proved advance over the old fabric tire, while this new Goodyear tire has been accepted almost over night.

"The willingness of American industry to scrap old methods and machinery as it found new ways and instruments to produce better goods, has been matched on the part of the public by a willingness to adopt new products, once it is satisfied that they do represent an advance over the old."

NASH WORKERS OWN STOCK

Seventeen million dollars worth of Nash Motors stock is owned by employes of the company.

This fact was announced today and it was pointed out that none of this stock includes that owned by the directing heads of the company.

Practically every foreman in the Nash plants and hundreds of men who work on the "bench," including many salaried employes, those employed on a time basis, and those employed on the basis of piece work are included among the company's stockholders.

It was pointed out that, "while at no time has an employe of the Nash Motors Company been urged to buy stock, the officers and other directing heads of the organization have been pleased with the habits of sound living and thrift which have made possible the purchase of most of the $17,000,000 worth of stock on the part of employes."

Find Body in Fire Ruins

South Paris, Me., April 13 (A.P.).—The charred remains of Elisha Turner, 85, were found today in the ruins of the Frothingham block, one of several burned in the $500,000 fire in Market square early yesterday.

The Dodge roadster or coupe provides a large telescoping drawer in the rear which can be used for business, or for hunting, camping or fishing trips.

CHEVROLET HAS SCHOOL IN HUB

"We believe the Chevrolet owner is entitled to the best service obtainable," says J. C. Chick, New England zone sales manager for Chevrolet Motor Company, "and it is with this object in mind that we have in operation here in Boston, a Chevrolet service school for Chevrolet dealers' mechanics.

"Here under the direction of a factory trained expert, the Chevrolet mechanic is instructed in the proper method of servicing Chevrolet automobiles. Factory standards are rigidly maintained, as the training covers tearing down and assembling of a motor, ignition, electrical units, trouble shooting and the practical management of a shop.

"A complete Duco refinishing plant is also maintained, and the student receives complete instruction in the refinishing of cars in Duco, touch-up work and striping.

"At the end of his term of instruction every student is given a test on the servicing of Chevrolet cars and those who pass with a grade of 85 per cent. or better are rewarded a diploma as a specialist on Chevrolet service."

HUNT $5,000 STOLEN FROM BODIES OF AUTO VICTIMS

Long Beach, Cal., April 13 (A.P.).—Police today investigated the possibility that more than $5,000 was taken from the bodies of a man and woman killed in an auto accident. The couple have been identified as David William Willis and Bernice Miller, wanted for murder and robbery in Ohio.

Edward A. Willis of Long Beach, who identified the dead man as his brother, declared a money belt containing $3,000 was worn by David when he started on the ride which ended fatally. Willis said he believed the woman carried a similar sum. Police believe the missing money is the proceeds of a Texas robbery.

COMPANY BUYS 20 MORE GRAHAM BROTHERS TRUCKS

The Beechnut Packing Company recently added 20 Graham Brothers ½-ton commercial cars to its fleet, bringing the total number of Graham Brothers trucks used by the company well over the 100 mark.

The commercial cars are used by the Beechnut Company in its advertising and sales promotion work throughout the country.

"Following a policy of suiting the automobile to the individual need, the Dodge Company has announced two cars, one a coupe, the other a roadster, each with a large telescoping drawer in the rear making the car convenient for business, as well as hunting, camping and fishing trips," declared C. F. Massey, sales manager of the Henshaw Motor Company.

"This process of adapting the motor car to the individual need is one of the striking recent developments in the industry," he said. "The aim is to provide for each customer just that sort of vehicle best suited to his purposes, either merely as a means of transportation, or as an auxiliary to business or recreation.

"The drawer on the cars contains a large amount of space, but, when closed the machine has the usual appearance except that the spare tire is brought forward on the left hand side of the running board. This however, does not interfere with the driver's door.

SEIZE $200,000 RUM IN FIGHT

Hoboken, N. J., April 13 (A. P.).—Two customs officers today captured the 1,600-ton freighter Forti Gaines at the Fletcher dry dock, seizing 4,000 cases of Scotch whiskey, Holland gin and champagne, valued roughly at $200,000.

Two members of the crew were caught, the rest escaping under cover of bullets from a six chamber .32 calibre mounted gun on the freighter's deck which raked the two small customs launches as they raced into the dock.

The prisoners, captured by a Hoboken policeman after a chase of two or three blocks, were locked up as disorderly persons and will probably be arraigned late today before U. S. Commissioner Stanton. They identified themselves as Edward Hanrahan of Rutherford, and Joseph Moloney of Philadelphia.

MAY PENSION CHECKS WILL NOT BE HELD UP

Washington, April 13 (A.P.).—Interior Department clerks today began making out checks for May pension payments, aggregating more than $15,000,000 to the 500,000 beneficiaries for whom Congress failed to provide funds before it adjourned. The checks will be placed in the mails in time to be received by the pensioners on May 4, their regular monthly pay day.

Funds for the month have been advanced by the Treasury, and there will be no interruption in the distribution of checks.

The Treasury advance will be charged against the Interior Department appropriation for the fiscal year beginning July 1 next.

GOVERNMENT TO GRADE HIGHER CLASSED BEEF

Washington, April 13 (A.P.).—Grading and stamping of choice and prime beef will be begun by Federal supervisors about May 1 at Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Omaha and Sioux City.

Should the experiment prove successful, the Agricultural Department may extend the service to other grades of beef. Already there is a demand for this service from St. Louis, St. Paul and Cleveland, but it was said these markets will have to wait until funds are available.

In years to come, airships, above storms and clouds, about eight miles up, will circle the earth, dropping passengers at principal stops in smaller planes. Those great round-the-world airships will take on fuel and supplies from smaller planes, and come down for repairs, perhaps not once in a year. Eventually they will take wireless power from the earth. Then men will really fly.

UNDER PROSPERITY and high wages, labor unions are gradually losing power just as they gradually gained power in the last century. An important milestone in labor's downhill journey is last Monday's decision by the United States Supreme Court, sustaining an injunction of stone-cutters and declaring unions subject to the anti-trust law in restraint of trade.

JUSTICE BRANDEIS and Holmes dissented; nevertheless, unions interfering with "trade" can now be enjoined. It is safe to predict that in their case the Sherman act will prove efficient.

ITALIAN RADICALS speak their minds in court, even in the shadow of death, Zaniboni, member of the Italian chamber, corresponding to a Congressman in this country, accused of plotting to kill Mussolini, says: "I admit I planned to restore the government to the State by killing Mussolini, the imposter. I should have done it had I been arrested four hours later."

MUSSOLINI, not worried, says, "I refuse to b. assassinated," and goes about his business exercising absolute power in accordance with his best judgment. And Italian money values rise steadily.

LADIES AND gentlemen getting divorces in Paris would have been interested to hear a New York Supreme Court judge say two days ago, "some day those ladies and gentlemen will find that they are not divorced at all. Some estate coming into court will raise and settle the question. A Gould divorce in Paris, apparently upheld in the United States courts, means nothing, because in that case Paris had been for years the last established domicile of that husband and wife."

YOUNGER SET APPROVE WHIPPET COLLEGIATE

"The appeal of the Whippet sport roadster—the Collegiate—with the younger set, is responsible in part for the unusual sales of this model recorded throughout the country," said Herbert Fitch, New England manager of the Willys-Overland Company, today. "Since the Collegiate was introduced it has assumed a position of leadership in the light four classification.

"The Whippet Collegiate has power, speed, and worlds of pickup and "pep" to meet all demands of city or country driving. It is built on the low swung Whippet chassis which provides safe driving under all conditions, through a low center of gravity. As an extra safety factor the car is equipped with four-wheel brakes. It will travel 20 miles on a gallon and is capable of 55 miles an hour."

Two New Parts in DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CAR Tell Important Story

NOTICE THESE TWO PICTURES

The small part is a new exhaust valve—now used on all Dodge engines. Also on all fine aeroplane engines. Made of alloy steel, containing Silicon and Chromium, it costs four times as much as the valve it replaces.

The other is Dodge Brothers new five-bearing crankshaft. Made of costly chrome vanadium steel. One of the finest shafts in any engine.

EACH TELLS AN IMPORTANT STORY

The small part typifies hundreds of similar refinements made by Dodge Brothers during the past two years . . . endless detailed improvements, never spoken of, rarely observed by the layman, but vitally important in their total effect on performance and dependability.

With the new crankshaft, many other major improvements could be listed. A new silent-type clutch. A new two-unit starting system. Smarter and stauncher body design. Bright new colors. Comfort-tilt seats. New silent-type muffler. New steering ease. Softer pedal action. New air cleaner. Improved engine mounting. New design propeller shaft, differential, axle shafts . . . and many others.

Drive the car now! Experience its new zest and flexibility—marked ease of operation—pronounced comfort—and the striking new smoothness and silence of the motor at all speeds!

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Christopher Shop Cook Book Published; George H. Lymans Sailing on Liner De Grasse Today

QUITE APPROPRIATELY, AND FINDING an enthusiastic market, the Christopher Shop's Cook Book made its initial appearance yesterday, at the final Christopher Shop luncheon. The luncheon was a succession of epicurean delights for the smart company that fairly taxed the capacity of the colorful Club Marco in Newbury street. And everyone exclaimed over the pretty Cook Book, all brave in its bright blue oil cloth covers, and done in the loose leaf manner that invites additions to the record of choice dishes. An ornament, truly, to the prettiest of kitchens, and just the thing for a bride.

AS USUAL FOR THESE LUNCHEONS, MRS. Horace Mocleon, Mrs. Ralph Doane, Mrs. Wilbur Grant and other guiding spirits of the Shop engineered it successfully. The Junior League girls, who served so efficiently and happily, were directed by Mrs. J. Pennington Gardiner. And some of the regulars were Miss Elizabeth Leland, Mrs. Jacob Rogers, Mrs. Robert Treat Paine, Mrs. Walter Merriam Pratt, Mrs. Nathaniel Emmons and Mrs. Frederick MacNichol. Plans for the Shop's Autumn and Winter campaign for friends is well under way, and includes affairs every whit as original as the luncheons have proved

SAILING AWAY ON THE STEAMSHIP DE Grasse today are Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lyman of Commonwealth avenue, distinguished members of Boston's old-established aristocracy, who go abroad for a Spring holiday. The Lymans, senior, are grandparents in the maternal line of an interesting young matron. Mrs. Josiah Child, who, since her Ellen Lovering days and marriage in Emmanuel, has lived abroad in Paris, where Mr. Child is studying

WHAT WOMAN CAN EVER RESIST A Fashion Show? Surely not the charming and chic Mrs. William Gordon Means, who looked herself the very essence of smartness, in gray tailleur, as she tripped into Crosby's to watch the mannikins sway and posture in costumes pour le sport and costumes designed for feminine allure. Mrs. Means is just back in town, so I hear, from a Southern round, spent mainly at Camden in South Carolina.

I ALSO SAW THAT BRIGHT-EYED MATRON, Mrs. George Lyman, Jr. (Eleanor Higginson), daughter-in-law of the senior Lymans, mentioned just above as having sailed abroad. Mrs. Henry Daland Chandler was a visitor at the show, also Mrs. Dunbar Lockwood, Mrs. George Dutton of Medfield, Mrs. John L. Hall, Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller and Mrs. Eben S. Doolittle. The show is repeated today, with new and lovely things just out of their boxes to be shown.

MERRY AS THE CHIME OF WEDDING BELLS YET TO RING, was the "shower" Miss Josephine Jewell gave yesterday for Miss Carolyn Keyes, whose betrothal to Stedman Buttrick was one of the romantic news items of a few weeks ago. Both young people hail from historic old Concord—Miss Keyes being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Keyes, and Mr. Buttrick tracing an ancestry right back to the famous battle at the Bridge and the Major Buttrick who, commanded in that never-to-be-forgotten conflict.

MRS. FLORENCE CLOSE GALE IS GIVING TONIGHT, TO A choice circle of her intimates, one of her charming readings. Flappers in Germany Rush to Lipstick and Face Powder

Berlin, April 13 (A.P.).—Flappers in Germany are taking to the lipstick and the use of cosmetics in general with increasing avidity.

The Dawes plan and stabilized prices have brought back the lipstick and the rest of the things in the vanity case until now the monthly production of face powder in Germany amounts to more than 100,000 packages, to say nothing of large quantities of the imported article, this chiefly of French production.

Young girls, most of them shop and offices employes, are the chief buyers.

DODGE INCOG IN HAWAII TO MAKE UP WITH WIFE

Honolulu, April 13 (A.P.).—Horace E. Dodge, scion of the wealthy automobile family, avoided a small army of acquaintances and newspapermen here when he slipped off the liner Wilhelmina in the uniform of a ship's officer, entered a waiting automobile and vanished.

San Francisco, April 13 (A.P.).—A photograph of Horace E. Dodge, wealthy scion of the automobile family, was sent to Honolulu from here by radio to enable newspapermen there to determine if the man on the liner Wilhelmina was the wealthy Detroit man.

He flew from Los Angeles here, while the liner waited two hours. He gave his name to Los Angeles as "Jack Kennedy," but confided to the plane pilot he was Dodge. Dodge was reported to be making the trip in an attempt to effect a reconciliation with his wife.

OPERA STARS IN FREE CANTATA AT BROCKTON

Brockton, April 13.—Several thousand residents of Brockton will hear two fre performances of the cantata, "The Seven Last Words of Christ," interpreted by Metropolitan and Chicago Opera singers, thanks to Edgar B. Davis. The performances will be given at the Brockton Theatre on Good Friday, at noon and 3 p. m. respectively, with Ethel Hayden, soprano; Paul Olthouse, tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Richard Bonelli, baritone of the Chicago Opera Company as soloists.

A group of musicians from the Boston Orchestral Society will play and there will be a chorus composed of members of the Brockton Choral Art Club.

NEW GOVERNOR IN PORTO RICO PREDICTED

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR., Editor of Universal Service.

Washington, April 13.—President Coolidge may have to find a new governor for Porto Rico, soon after he has appointed a new Ambassador to Cuba.

It has been stated by me that Major-General Enoch H. Crowder, American Ambassador at Havana, was ill and had asked to be relieved. This was confirmed at the White House officially. Ambassador Crowder was highly praised for his work at Havana.

No official inkling has yet been given, however, of the situation at San Juan There Governor Horace M. Towner, of Michigan, who is nearing 70 years of age, finds his physical strength heavily taxed by the increasing burdens of his office.

Toward the San Juan "politicos" Governor Towner has at times pursued the policy of "conciliation" which Governor-General Wood has been criticized by the "politicos" at Manila for not pursuing.

VINDICATES WOOD.

But the difference between the financial condition of the Philippine government and that of the Porto Rican government today appears to vindicate the rigid policy of economy to which Governor-General Wood has adhered.

By the frequent use of the veto power the Philippine budget has been balanced, and in the first two years of the Wood administration the current expenses of that government were reduced 25 per cent.

Business is good in the Philippines today," Taxes there are better paid than ever. There is little unemployment. Prosperity and tranquility are the rule throughout the islands.

BUDGET TROUBLESOME.

Governor Towner in Porto Rico inherited from his predecessor this disadvantage from a financial point of view: A large budget for 1924 and 1925 was submitted. Not only did the Legislature oppose any serious cutting of expenses, but its members were anxious to increase appropriations for public works, based on loans and current expenditures based on current receipts. These receipts through taxation, however, have not increased as rapidly as was expected.

DANISH KING AND QUEEN UNHURT IN RAIL MISHAP

Copenhagen, Denmark, April 13 (A.P.).—King Christian and Queen Alexandra had a narrow escape during the night when a sleeping car was derailed as it was leaving a ferry connecting the Islands of Zealand and Fumen The King and Queen, en route to their seaside villa at the Skaw, on the northern extremity of Jutland, were asleep when the car left the rails. King Christian was hurled out of his berth. Railroad officials admitted that it was little short of a miracle that the car did not overturn.

FRAMING FARM BILL TO SUIT COOLIDGE

Washington, April 13 (A.P.).—Drafting of a farm relief bill in the work Chairman McNary of the Senate Agriculture Committee has mapped out for himself this summer.

The senator is co-author of the bill vetoed by the President.

HANNAUER SEES BETTER TIMES AHEAD OF N. E.

Making his first appearance before the stockholders, George Hannauer of the Boston & Maine Railroad declared today at the annual meeting in Gilbert Hall, Tremont Temple, that New England's industrial success lies with its people.

"As New England goes, so goes the Boston & Maine," President Hannauer said. "It is a matter of taking advantage of every opportunity to improve methods, and that, I believe, is being done to an increasing extent.

He told the stockholders, whose meeting was presided over by Homer Loring, chairman of the board, that the freight business of the road increased substantially in the first three months of the year, but that for March and April apparently a considerable drop is shown by comparison.

NO INDUSTRIAL HIATUS.

This, he explained, was a result of the loss of anthracite coal shipments such as last year, when anthracite was moved in abnormal quantities following the coal strike.

Passenger revenue fell off 10 per cent., he said, because of the early good condition of highways, and this loss of traffic, coming on top of the increase of $2,400,000 in the railroad's wage bill, has forced drastic operative economy.

"I do not want to leave the impression that a decrease in freight traffic means New England industrial conditions are bad, however," he explained. "On the contrary, our loadings of outbound traffic are a little better than last year and that is really the barometer of New England industrial condition."

TWO NEW DIRECTORS.

The stockholders approved, without dissent, a payment quarterly instead of semi-annually, of dividends on prior preference and first preferred stock and voted to ratify the lease of lines north of Wells River, Vt., to the Canadian Pacific and Quebec Central.

In the balloting for directors there were only two changes, George von E. Meyer of Hamilton resigned and Walter M. Parker of Manchester died, their places being taken by Roy L. Partridge of Burlington, Vt., and William T. Hobbs, vice-president.

A Startling Serial Story of Love, Terror and the Night Clubs

Jacqueline Kay comes to Boston from Houlton, Me., and obtains an engagement as singer in the Sea Shell, a cabaret Julius Lupino, the proprietor, to whom Jacqueline is attracted and repelled, takes interest in her. He invites her to join some friends. She meets Tom Ware, who is warned by Lupino to keep "hands off." Ware resents Lupino's attitude. Jacqueline, angry, leaves the table. One of the singers tells her that she can keep Lupino in his place if she is clever. Lupino makes advances to Jacqueline and she threatens to leave. He refuses to allow this and apologizes. He asks her to be friendly and extends his hand.

When Jacqueline leaves the Sea Shell after midnight she finds Lupino waiting to take her home. She refuses his escort He refuses to allow this. They see Tom Ware waiting in a roadster. Lupino takes Jacqueline's arm. She is accosted by a man whom Lupino knocks down. With a sinking heart, Jacqueline realizes that Lupino has killed the fellow.

Frightened, Jacqueline begs Lupino to leave her. He refuses and tells her that he has done this thing for her. He begs her not to "turn him down in any wrangle with the cops."

CHAPTER 5

JACQUELINE, at the end of the second day, realized with a cowering sort of humiliation that she had become famous through the daily newspapers. Quick to seize upon a "story" that presented picturesque features, the reporters had leaped to the Lupino murder story with joy in their hearts. Vigorously they crowded the headlines with their terse, salient phraseology:

ESCORT KILLS INSULTER OF PRETTY GIRL WITH HIS BARE HANDS. . . . POWERFUL CABARET OWNER SLAYS NOTORIOUS CRIMINAL IN CAVE-MAN STYLE . . . "CHIVALRY PROMPTED KILLING," SAYS LUPINO . . . "WOULD DO IT AGAIN," SLAYER DECLARES.

The excitement, the heinous abuse of the actual killing, and the facts immediately following it, left Jacqueline in a state of confusion that was further muddled by the shower of publicity from the press.

From the station house she had been taken to police headquarters, where she had given a frank account to an assistant district attorney of exactly what had happened. This, she felt, had not been a betrayal of Lupino since there had been an eye witness to the killing. Convinced of her honesty and her innocence the police had allowed her to go home, while Lupino was held.

Two elements contributed to make the home de sensationa.

The identification of the dead man disclosed that he was Birney Sugge, well known to the police as "The Lump" and as "Birney The Lump." With an increasing horror, Jacqueline read in one of the papers concerning the man who had accosted her.

The violent death of Birney The Lump, at the hands of Miss Kay's gigantic avenger, marks the close of a criminal career that embraced, the police say, almost every branch of crime. For years the dead man had been a notorious member of a criminal gang, had served time for burglary, and a two-year sentence in Atlanta for violation of the Mann Act. Among his many activities were counterfeiting, the illegal sale of narcotics, automobile stealing and felonious assault. Thirty-seven years old at the time of his death, The Lump had spent seven-

New Easter Styles Have Gold Buckles and Two-and-a-Half-Inch Heels

Haverhill, April 13 (A.P.).—Feminine footwear for Easter will be unusually brilliant this year, the Haverhill Gazette says today. This city is one of the leading centres in the manufacturer of women's shoes.

"Well dressed women," the Gazette says, "will wear shoes of striking color and design this Easter, ringing from pure-tinted and the new pearl lustre to navy blue and black patent leather, according to Haverhill shoe manufacturers, who have just completed making 4,000,000 pairs of women's shoes for the Easter trade.

HEELS ARE VERY HIGH.

Milady's desire to look tall, revered in clothing for fashions, has created a heavy demand for very high heels on her slippers. This heel known as the Spanish-Louis spike is two and one-half inches high. Small gold and silver buckles with one-strap slippers are becoming quite popular and these are being developed into Colonial effects

"A new color for slippers has come forward this season, called porcelain blue shade, which is attracting much attention. Many shoes are being made in the brilliant of the yellow of the prettiest being a plain opera pump of navy blue kid with a silver buckle.

"White slippers with green blue and red heels and straps will be worn this summer."

RULING MAKES LABOR SERVILE, ASSERTS GREEN

Washington, April 13 (A.P.).—Organized labor will be unable to reconcile its point of view with that of a majority of Supreme Court justices that strikers can be enjoined when their actions constitute a restraint of interstate commerce, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said today.

The court's opinion was expressed Monday in the Bedford Cut Stone Company case.

Green added that labor would be aligned with the dissenting opinion of Justices Brandeis and Holmes that application of the Sherman anti-trust law as interpreted by the court "renders the condition of working people to the point where it approximates involuntary servitude."

Fitchburg, April 13—Angry housewives who, although no longer brides, still wear the diamond engagement ring given by husband before he was so bald, were in a high state of indignation today in common with Fitchburg residents generally over a "personal effects tax" drive begun by the assessors.

For the first time in the history of the city, assessors are jotting down as taxable such things as pianos, graphophones, radios, rings, watches, bracelets and the like, and a woman who possesses a $500 diamond ring must pay on a basis of 25.4 a year as a sort of license for romance.

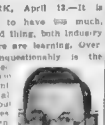
Cure for Overproduction As Seen by Forbes; Yours?

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, April 13.—It is possible to have too much, even of a good thing, both industry and agriculture are learning. Over production unquestionably is the most serious economic problem of the moment.



B. C. Forbes

In face of all complaints about too-low prices the government reports that Winter wheat acreage this season is 5 per cent greater than a year ago.

The oil industry is going the world a big job to consume is not yet ascertained.

SINCE the de bsine arising from overproduction were presented in this column, the problem has been discussed by Bernard M. Baruch, upon whom fell the task of speeding up production ten years ago when he was made chairman of the war industries board. Says Mr. Baruch:

"The big question before us now is whether we can solve the problem of overproduction. Heretofore we have always permitted it to solve itself, relying upon the law of supply and demand to recover our industrial balance again. The law has always worked, but it has always taken

"years for the nation is more or less agonized by the plight of the farmer. But what is that plight? It is simply that the farmer has been producing much more than he can sell advantageously. This is true not only of the grains, but of fruit, vegetables, oils, meat products, tobacco and sugar. There is some real suffering now among producers of these things.

"A way must be found to make farming pay, and if we do not find an orderly way to do this, certain fundamental laws of economics will do the job for us in a painful and disorderly manner. If the farmers cannot make a success of farming they will quit their farms until there is such a scarcity of food that it will pay to go back to them."

MR. BARUCH offers no ready-made panacea for over-production. His conclusion is this:

"The problem would seem to be how to limit production, when the situation demands it, without at the same time limiting the purchasing power of producers and consumers. That is, how to keep from glutting the market without curtailing such market as there is.

"If we could solve that p m, we need have no more business depressions. Every improvement, in fact either in production or distribution, could then result in more luxury or in more leisure for all. The question is simply whether we have the will and the capacity to solve it now, or must we wait until a few more industrial panics have created problems which it may be impossible to solve."

• • •

WELL, WHAT is the answer going to be?

WHEN THE South last year raised an oversupply of cotton President Coolidge promptly appointed a committee there, with the leadership of Eugene Meyer, Jr., organized financial interests to take four million bales off the market. Farm "relief" measures have been aimed at limiting the crop surpluses. Some have even urged that the government regulate oil production.

But are not all such measures and proposals superficial, non-fundamental, makeshift?

• • •

GETTING DOWN to bedrock, must not the final answer be that the people of the United States must learn to produce only such quantities of products as they need at "a reasonable price"? Must there not come a limitation of the productive powers of industry, so reducing wheat and other grains cotton, oil and other things which our countries may be able to produce cheaper than we can? Must we not put a relatively larger number of people at work to produce things which we can produce cheaper than the rest of the world?

Government subsidies may be necessary in some directions—in shipping for example. But in the final analysis would not such be of the solution must be sought, propinely and perhaps painfully, along the basic line here suggested.

GIBBS TELLS OF PUBLIC UTILITIES' RELATIONS

"The public utility which recognizes first of all, in its relations with the public, its responsibility to the public will be the most successful." This is the theme underlying a lecture before the class in public utility management of the Harvard School of Business Administration by L. D. Gibbs, assistant head of the public relations bureau and superintendent of engineering for the Boston Edison Company.

Illustrating the value of such a policy in all advertising and publicity, Mr. Gibbs traced the company's public relations and advertising experience from its beginning. He pointed out that there must be a definite plan behind all successful advertising and publicity.

With the Edison company these have centered in themselves into a genuine interest in all the community and its welfare, progress and prosperity. Keeping the public informed on all developments in the electrical field, placing news and information in the reach of all who want them, which involves co-operation with collateral interests producing such appliances; in short, rendering such a complete and adequate service as shall build in return a co-operative and friendly attitude on the part of the public served.

"Life is public relations" to the public utility, Mr. Gibbs emphasized, and the dominant note in all the relations of the Edison company with the public. It has developed a broad policy of fairness which reflects in all its activities and has proved invaluable in its public relations, he said.

SPEED, ACCURACY, INTEREST — NEWS THE DAY IT H

Dove of Peace Back in Boxing Game

By Jack Conway

"THE Dove of Peace is once more doing the Black Bottom along Boxing Row," remarked Mr. Boston today. "The boxing promoters have put away their battle armor for future use," resumed the veteran, "and have settled down to the more serious task of making money.

"There will not be two boxing shows in this city on next Monday night. This will be a relief to the sporting writers as well as to the dear old public which, is anxious to give a little of its attention to baseball, Marathon running and such things.

"As the situation now stands, the Argonne A. A. will stage a heavyweight show at Mechanics Building on Monday night. One Ernie Schaaf of Patterson, N. J., rated as one of the best of the younger crop of heavyweights, will try to pace. Leo Gates, Monarch Indian, out of the picture, is a feature ten-round bout. Another ten session affair will bring together Monte Munn, Nebraska lawmaker, and Dick Ferguson, better known to the members of the cauliflowered profession as the Honolulu Kid.

Mr. Boston

"The Suffolk A. A. will wheel the Sammy Fuller-Chick Suggs featherweight clash into the Arena a week from Friday night.

"THE young men who protect the future of the boxing racket may now bow their learned heads knowingly and say that the grand old game has been saved.

"The clashing of boxing dates always draws forth a great howl from the protectors of the manly art of getting the dough from the unsuspecting public. I never could see any great harm in two or even six boxing clubs operating on the same night if they cared to do so.

"I understand that if there are two boxing shows on the same evening that it is still necessary for the rival promoters to pay their rent and hire the usual number of preliminary boxers. Surely the landlords have no legitimate kick, while the preliminary boys receive an added opportunity to pick up a few dimes for their coffee and doughnuts.

"THE referee, judges, timekeeper, ushers and other attendants must be paid under any conditions. You could not expect these gentlemen to register any complaint even though there were six shows a night on the ex-clusive nights of the week.

"I am also under the impression that the main bout performers would have to be paid the amount of money called for by their contracts or else the club would be suspended.

"In short, if there are several shows on the same night, the only real sufferers, if there are any, are the promoters. They are likely to have their bankrolls dented, but that is entirely their own affair.

"I DON'T believe the dear old public will fold up because it cannot take in two rival boxing shows. Perhaps it would feel better if it remained at home and played dominoes or listened to the radio.

"The ruling powers of our select fistic organizations, very naturally, would be expected to screech from the housetops if their bankrolls were clipped as a result of boxing conflicts. I have found that screeching is about the best little thing that some of our promoters do. In fact, some of the promoters of cauliflowered ear carnivals can yell so loud when they are not presented with lollypops and gold coins by Mr. Public that they really should be doing their stuff outside sideshows at the circus.

"Don't allow yourself to get excited over these threatened boxing wars. If there are any casualties in these clashes, it will only be the promoters. Which shouldn't give cause for too much public sorrow."

MAKING GOOD

In the big show is Herbie Thomas, new Braves' second baseman, who was a sensation in the Eastern League last season. He is shown here as he rounded third base on his way home with the first Braves' run of the season.

Banny Picks Braves' Ace to Put Team in Victory Column

By NICK FLATLEY

Just another baseball season now. Both the Braves and the Red Sox have been beaten in opening games, and the sun have sagged back, to wait for the break that will bring one team or the other up into the baseball ruckus.

The opening was a sad disappointment to a great crowd here in Boston. [illegible] Brooklyn Dodgers are chronic first-[illegible] initial game since 1913.

This afternoon the Braves go back after the Wilbert Robinsons, and with the personnages that [illegible] out of [illegible] and Rudy Kallio [illegible] get the season really under way.

The Tribe assimilated a real smearing to begin a new season, but the beating arrived on top of a few errors, mechanical and otherwise. [illegible] pected when a team is trying too hard to please a crowd that wants to cheer, but is also ready to unfurl the raucous raspberry.

With the opening over and done [illegible] they certainly look to be a [illegible] ter.

Times haven't changed, as far as Braves' mistakes go. Two foul flies lost in the veering breeze helped the Robins to as many runs. Two errors handed over three more. The mechanically perfect play that can be expected in big league baseball would have held that first pastime in for the natives beyond question.

The slips happened, those [illegible] Lewis May, a weak armed [illegible] Bennys last year.

THERE were several hopeful points about the Braves that could be seen even in the dust of defeat. Of George Moriarty, who has grown [illegible] from the master of [illegible] Leslie May, a weak armed [illegible] Eddie Moore started to hit that ball, and that, in itself, gave the team more satisfaction than a victory could have recorded. Eddie showed the boss that he was a wonderful fielding third baseman in the South, but he stopped hitting, after he was nipped on the forehead one day in batting practice.

40 Minutes After Game Newsreel at Theatres

Another big "beat" was chalked up by International Newsreel last night when films of the Braves-Dodgers game with the final score, were delivered, ready to be screened, at five metropolitan theatres forty minutes from the close of the contest.

At 6.13 p. m., special messengers arrived at the Strand, Orpheum, State, Modern and Beacon Theatres with the motion pictures of the game. Shortly after, subscribing theatres were supplied. Hugo Johnson, International Newsreel staff photographer, was responsible for this record.

M'GILL PLANS SURPRISE FOR MALCEWICZ

Friends of Pat McGill, Irish champion wrestler, were laughing today because they think Patsput a good one over on Malcewicz last week. Some of the fans were of the opinion that Pat was not in top form when he wrestled Sarpolis at the Grand Opera House.

True, Pat didn't display any great form but then he won. He was under the impression that Malcewicz and some friends planted to get a fall on his stuff. "If that was the case," said Pat, "I fooled them. Malcewicz will see just where I fit when I get him in the ring with me at the Boston Arena on next Tuesday night.

"I am in great shape and want to prove to the public that the astounding white is just as dangerous as the reverse flying mare. If I get Malcewicz up with my favorite hold, he will take a ride just the same as the rest of the boys do. My friends expect me to win and I won't disappoint them."

Ed Strangler Lewis, holder of the world's championship diamond studded belt, plans to come to Boston a few days in advance to get ready for his fray with Abe Kaplan. Ed is one fellow who likes to be ready. True, he doesn't always try to make tough matches but when he makes them Big Ed will go through to the limit. He realizes that Abe is a tough fellow.

However, the fact that Lewis has a real headache has no terrors for Abe. He is confident he can win the match. He doesn't believe that any man living can beat him. He points to his run of twenty four straight victories. "Why not beat me as if I am so soft," says Abe.

Alexander Garkewienko, the European champion, will meet Harry Stevens, the American Apollo, in another finish bout on the card.

TED LYNCH

One of the best college games of the year is scheduled for this afternoon when the strong Springfield nine meets Harvard at Soldiers Field. Two more evenly matched nines would be hard to find and the result should be in doubt to the last out.

Springfield put up a great game against Boston College, Saturday, losing 2 to 1. This afternoon the visitors will face a Crimson nine which is regarded as the best turned out at Soldiers Field in the last ten years.

Coach Fred Mitchell has nominated Dick Ketchum, a sophomore, to face the Springfield sluggers. The former Thayer Academy captain will be starting his first varsity game and his work will be closely watched by the mentor.

Ketchum appears to have a world of stuff and providing he keeps in the game every minute, he should turn in a creditable performance. The only fault with Ketchum is an inclination to let down when he is ahead.

Foley to Run Marathon Again for Fun of It

By MYLES T. McSWEENEY.

It was probably twenty years ago that we stood at the corner of Massachusetts and Commonwealth avenues, part of the shivering wall that watched the B. A. A. Marathon runners draw near their goal.

We remember it distinctly. Our peanuts were long since devoured. And it was getting colder as the shadows lengthened along the way.

We had seen the winner pass by. And the second man, and the twentieth man, and perhaps the fortieth man.

"Why don't we go home?" we queried our parental guide.

WAIT FOR FOLEY.

"Let's wait and see old Peter Foley finish," answered my father.

Soon there was a cheer from the thinning crowd. We looked up Commonwealth Avenue.

"There's Peter Foley," said my father, as a short, thin figure plodded wearily in the middle of the road.

We saw nothing about Peter Foley that would make a little fellow freeze to watch. But we remembered the name.

Yesterday an old man came into the office.

"I'm going to run in the marathon this year," I thought you would like to know."

And answering an inquiring look—"My name is Peter Foley."

Peter Foley! We thought he was long since a member of the Celestial A. C.

Peter Foley, seventy-five years old, will run over the B. A. A. marathon course next Tuesday. Of course he cannot run officially. He's too old for that. But he will run.

FOR THE FUN OF IT.

"Why are you running, at your age, such a killing distance?"

"Oh, just for the fun of it." And Peter's gray eyes twinkled.

"That's my idea of a good time," continued Peter. "I expect to cover the distance in three hours and a half, so you see how good I feel."

Peter Foley weighs exactly one hundred and twenty-seven pounds with all his clothes on and he running shoes in his hands. You can figure out his net weight for yourself.

Ponce De Leon, after drinking a highball from the fountain of youth, would think twice before running twenty-six miles. But Peter Foley—he's different.

Peter has finished the regulation marathon distance several times. He never won a race. He never tried. He just "ran for the fun of it," and was forty-seven years old before he ever ran a race.

"I guess I'm just a natural runner," said Peter, when asked the secret of his endurance. "I don't drink . . . not the kind of stuff they serve nowadays. And I don't smoke."

GIVE HIM A HAND.

Feeling a bit solicitous for such a grand old man, we ventured to ask, in a tactful way, if there wasn't someone who would object to his running the race . . . any Mrs. Foley.

"No, no," replied the veteran. "When you feel like doing a thing, just go ahead and do it. That's my motto."

So watch for Peter Foley. And when he comes into view, give him a hand. He deserves it.

Big Money Year

Scandals Help

SIX HOMERS A DAY KEEP ENNUI AWAY

BASEBALL has broken from the barrier and the start seems to indicate a season that will contain real thrills right down through the finishing series in October. The boys didn't waste any time beginning to clout baseballs out of the orchards.

Six circuit cracks were registered on the first day, and that will go down in the records. One would be inclined to think the lively ball had been brought back, except for the fact that the round-trippers were rung up in the two smallest pastures in baseball—Chicago and Philadelphia.

Nick Flatley

Rogers Hornsby slapped one out for the Giants. So did Harper and Bill Terry, the latter getting his with the corners loaded. The great Rog has the jump on Babe Ruth, who was yanked out of the ball game like a mere rookie after he had fanned twice and popped up.

Looks as if Miller Huggins was determined to make his expensive swatter earn that big salary. Hug, however, had his day's fun, for he beat the Athletics badly, the club that has been picked quite generally to run the Yankees out of the title

Cobb made one hit and Tris Speaker clicked out a couple for Washington. Old Zach Wheat, chased up by Mack to pinch hit, busted out a single. George Uhle of Cleveland and Ray Kremer of Pittsburgh, the two best pitchers in the big leagues last year, won tough opening games. The pair picked up where they left off, and by themselves threaten to keep two clubs in the gold hunt.

The Cubs knocked the living tar out of the champion Cardinals, chasing Alexander off the hill. Earl Webb, a Louisville recruit, hoisted two homers out of the park, and Charlie Grimm, entertaining first baseman, busted one with two pals on the mat tresses. Little Root pitched a great game, and Joe McCarthy let the league know that his ball club is not to be sneezed at.

Both Boston clubs were beaten, which did not upset the dope, though it did put the seal on quite a flock of native hope. But one game doesn't mean much at the start of a flag sprint. A wild and exciting season would seem to be out in front, if the results of an opening day mean a thing.

WELL, AS AL NICKERSON REMARKED THIS A. M., THERE ARE ONLY 153 MORE GAMES.

Three home clubs won in the American League, while three out of four natives were licked in the National. That may mean something

RECORD IN TURNSTILE TURNING IN SIGHT

BASEBALL is stepping out on its biggest money year. The crowds at the openings indicate that. The gang that stormed Braves Field, to watch the first game in Boston, surprised the most optimistic prophets. There hasn't been much April enthusiasm in these parts for quite a few years.

The Yankees hauled 63,000 fans into their stadium. The Phils played to capacity, while the Cubs broke attendance records in Chicago. The boys were out in force everywhere, and most of the magnates have enough money to pay all Spring training expenses this month.

There are so many new angles to the game this year—shifted stars and managers—that fan curiosity will hardly be satisfied by the time the kids begin kicking footballs around.

The Hornsby-Ruth duel will make New York a gold mine in both leagues, just as long as the two sluggers keep hitting the ball. There is plenty of gravy, as profit is vulgarly called, in sight in both leagues, and apparently enough big money spots to make owners of chronic second division clubs happy. Some of them need that sort of joy very badly.

A casual spectator would be inclined to think that scandals in the Winter help the ol' game in the Spring.

COURT RULES REFORMER IN DEFENSE

Madison, Wis., April 13 (A.P.).—The new basketball rule limiting the dribble to one ounce will cure eight major ailments of the game, in the opinion of Dr. Walter E. Meanwell, member of the rules committee which promulgated the new order and coach of the University of Wisconsin cage team.

Dr. Meanwell, originator of the short, incisive pass, exponent of the dribble when used prove a boon to the game, which now is reaching international importance.

His said the new rule would do three things for the game: Make basketball on a team basis in contrast to one-man performances save the game's brilliant few, and should now relegated to the shower; virtually eliminate "stalling" by the team in the lead; tend to eliminate accidents resulting from efforts to stop a dribbler; eliminate 70 per cent. of the fouls now blowing which now is caused by double dribbling; force coaches to perfect real plays instead of being merely bench managers; take a great burden off officials who have had to decide when a dribble was "double" and illegal, and moderate the speed of the game and give the lighter clever men a chance to break through the defense of big men.

"The action of the Rules Committee was not a snap judgment," Dr. Meanwell said, "but resulted from long consideration of some measure to bring about essential efficiency.

"In basketball today it is quite possible for one great dribbler to win a game and carry his team through many games. If we do eliminate this type of play, we cut down the spectacular, overwhelming brilliant man, but we are tickled to death to do this and substitute team play.

"We have gone on record as favoring the development of basketball along team lines.

"The one bounce rule will also save the game for the type of man now being lost—the small man. The western conference is now a six-foot group and the little man is noticeable for his absence.

"The 100-pound man with the dribble couldn't be stopped."

SHADE HAS NOW ONLY TO ELIMINATE FLOWERS

Chicago, April 13 (A.P.).—Only Tiger Flowers stands today between Dave Shade of California and a championship fight with the middleweight titleholder, Mickey Walker.

Shade last night outboxed Paul King of Paterson, N. J., in ten rounds, getting the decision of two judges and the referee. King, who had held Shade to a draw in a previous fight when both were welters, was the last battler in the middleweight division, excepting Flowers, to challenge Shade's right to a chance to the title.

Bruins Fight to Stay in Ice Title Series

Ottawa, Ont., April 13.—With their backs firmly against the wall, the Boston Bruins enter the fourth and possibly final game of their series with the Ottawa Senators for the world's hockey championship, here, tonight, prepared to do or die.

If the Hub team loses, the series is all over. Ottawa has the only victory scored in three games, the other two ending in a tie. Another win tonight will make the native champions.

The world's hockey series is supposed to be a best-three-out-of-five game affairs, but when the first game ended in a tie, President Frank Calder of the National Hockey League ruled that the series could not extend beyond five games, and that the team with the best record would be declared the winner if neither won three games.

If tonight's game results in a triumph for the Bruins or in a tie, the fifth and deciding game will be played in this city Saturday night.

If the Bruins win tonight, the winner of Saturday night's tilt will walk off with the honors, and should the latter game end in a tie, the series will be declared a draw and the money equally divided.

If tonight's contest ends in a tie, the best the Bruins can do will be to pull up on even terms with the natives and they will have to win the final game to accomplish this.

The Bruins, however, are not being considered by the Bruins. They want to either win or lose tonight, and they say they will not lose.

They don't believe it possible for Goalie Connell of the Senators to stave off defeat practically single-handed as he did Monday night, here, when by miraculous saving he kept the Bruins from walking away with the game, which ended in a 1 to 1 tie.

The Bruins intend to play offensive hockey from the start, and they believe that if they keep driving at Connell hard and long enough, sufficient shots will get by to insure them of victory.

The visitors outplayed the natives throughout the game Monday night and they are an even money choice to win tonight. If they succeed, they are almost sure to go to the goal services Saturday night.

With all the players well rested, tonight's fracas should be the banner one of the series.

It was announced here today that each player on the winning club would receive approximately $1,200 as his share of the series while the losers will have to be content with about $1,000 each.

SLATTERY SIGNS UP FOR THREE BOUTS

New York, April 13.—Jimmy Slattery, Buffalo light-heavyweight, yesterday hooked up with Tex Rickard for three matches. Slats' first appearance will be at the Yankee Stadium, May 19, in the semi-final to the Jack Sharkey-Jim Maloney fuss.

Though his opponents as yet have been selected by Matchmaker Jess McMahon, it is believed that Mike McTigue will be one. Martin Burke or Johnny Risko will in all probability be Slats' opponents on May 19.

SIX MICHIGAN STARS IN PENN RELAYS

Philadelphia, April 13 (A.P.).—Stephen J. Farrell, track coach at the University of Michigan, has entered six of his strongest men in the annual events of the University of Pennsylvania's relay carnival on April 23 and 9.

For many years Michigan has been represented at the carnival, but it's a new entries were said to have a better chance of success than any of their predecessors.

They are Lenson, in the two mile run, Hester, 100 yard dash; Northrop, pole vault and javelin; Shraves, decent; Katz, hammer throw, and Cooper in the 120-yard high hurdles.

Hester won the 100 yard dash last year.

GENE TUNNEY
World's Heavyweight Champion

Tunney Alone Was Calm on Night of Championship Fight—Gene's Confidence Cheered Up His Camp

THE general idea is that the real pre-fight nerve strain always is upon the fighter. Yet, in my experience, I find that "nerves" really afflict the manager, the trainer and the fighter's friends and his seconds infinitely more than they do the ringman about to go into battle.

In the days prior to my fight with Jack Dempsey, no one in the world was more supremely confident of my success than was Billy Gibson. And sharing the optimism with him, was Lon Fink, my trainer, and Jimmy Bronson, who was my chief second.

Those boys were the most cheerful, comforting fellows in the world. They felt I would annihilate Dempsey. They scoffed at his punching prowess declared that he never would lay a glove on me; they gleefully predicted while I was stopping the famous Dempsey rushes, I would be hammering his face with lefts and rights and rolling up a commanding lead on points.

Naturally, I concluded that as each hour brought me nearer to fight time and the chance at Dempsey, that those boys would become happier and more cheerful.

MANAGER GETS GLOOMY.

Imagine my surprise when I walked into my dressing room an hour or two before the fight and found the whole group of them suffering from "nerves" and depression. They were a gloomy lot—the gloomiest group of men I ever expect to see in my lifetime.

The reaction had come. All the work of getting me fit and ready was done. There wasn't anything else to do but think. And I guess they began to think about Dempsey—about his reputation as a "killer"; of the murderous puncher that he was reputed to be.

They thought about how Dempsey had knocked down the giants Jess Willard seven times; they thought how he had flattened the huge Luis Firpo seven times; how he had beaten other huge men with the sheer fury of his attack and the power of his steel fists. And those thoughts seemed to crowd out their earlier enthusiasm about me.

They had become depressed to a sad extreme. And when I saw that group, trying in a pathetic way to be cheerful and to conceal their gloom, I had to laugh. The whole thing struck me as funny—not as a reason for me to share their depression.

GENE CONFIDENT.

I had felt from the day the match was made, that I could whip Dempsey. I had gathered a good deal of faith in myself. And as each day brought the fight nearer, I was happier, for it meant that it was rapidly approaching achievement of my life's ambition.

When I walked into that dressing room, I was in a happy frame of mind. Faith in myself was strong and the fact that bout was only an hour or so away, instead of making me nervous, made me happy. So I took a good look around the room, laughed at the gloom boys, reached over, grabbed Billy Gibson, and said:

'This is the way you want me to do it, isn't it, Bill?'

And then I shot a powerful right-hand blow at a phantom foeman—the right hand punch that I had been practising secretly during all my training days.

My action seemed to lift the gloom partially. The boys were quick to note that I was not feigning confidence—they knew it was real. And they caught the spirit of the thing.

'Sure—sure—that's it, Gene,' grinned Bill. 'That's the punch that will win for you.'

And the party became a little more cheerful. But when the call came for me to go into the ring, the boys became a little bit nervous again. I guess they just couldn't get it out of their heads that Dempsey was a formidable foeman with a terrific punch—terrific, however, only if it landed solidly.

They perhaps were worried by the thought that I might not get out of the way of Dempsey's drives. I had no such thought. I felt my defense was good enough to nullify Dempsey's attack, no matter how fierce and aggressive it might be. And the full truth is that I didn't expect I would have to spend much time dodging Dempsey's blows.

EXPECTED TO K. O. JACK.

I expected to knock him out in the first round—with a right hand punch. I did land that blow, but my misfortune was that it missed the chin and landed on Dempsey's cheek bone.

Had it struck the mark, I feel certain, Dempsey would have gone down—and arisen only as an ex champ.

But that punch, landing on the cheek, staggered Jack—took much of the fight out of him. It really paved the roadway that led along to my ultimate triumph. Dempsey never was really dangerous after that—except during the fourth round fury.

When the fight began, my corner was nervous—apprehensive.

That fear was suffering again from that depression that comes to men who are seconding a fighter in battle. I had displayed suddenly much is at stake. But when I hit Dempsey with that right, shook him to the soles of his feet and won through every second of the first round fighting—well, things changed in my corner.

The old optimism and the cheerfulness came back and from the beginning of the second round, right through the end of the battle, every one in my corner was wholly cured of "nerves" and the glooms and depression—and confidence came back in mighty volume.

But if that first round had been a bad one for me—if Dempsey had won it as decisively as I did—I imagine many of the boys and some of the other boys wouldn't have lived through the entire ten rounds. "Nerves" probably would have killed all of them.

Many Post Entries for Marathon Expected

By STED CHANDLER.

At closing time the entry for the thirtieth annual Boston Athletic Association Marathon on April 19, showed the names of five former winners, Johnny Miles, Clarence De Mar, Frank Zuna, Edouard Fabre and Bill Kennedy, and a total enrolment of 142.

Closing time, however, is not to be regarded as too strict a designation, and it is expected that several more names will be added to the roll possibly including that of the holder of the Chicago Marathon championship, Arnold A. Anderson, the only man to defeat Clarence De Mar, in the Boston Marathon.

Sted Chandler

His first victory came in 1911, and then he followed it an eleven-year stretch. When he returned to the game in 1922 no one conceded him even a remote chance to repeat after eleven years. Let me write he gained for three consecutive years, '22, '23 and '24.

Zuna won the event in '21, and ran again in '24, but was forced to drop out. He was taken on the Olympics in spite of that, and it is toward the end of returning to these games in 1928 that he will endeavor to place well up in the field this Patriots' Day.

Fabre was the winner in 1915 while the veteran Bill Kennedy crashed through in 1917. Kennedy's entry this year was one of the last to come in, his club, the Comet A. C. of Port Chester, N. Y., sending its team entry in a group. The squad comprises a strong quintet which has given a good account of itself on numerous occasions. John Rost, Albert "Whitey" Mardines, Frank Martin and Nestor Erakson should need to introduce them to followers of the B. A. A. Marathon.

Other late arrivals included Albert Cosman, Lawrence S. Lord and Percy E. Reed of the Tech A. A., W. Club of Revere, Sten Lundstrom of the Upsala Swedish Club of Cambridge; Theodore Gault of Boston, Stanley M. Smith of Cambridge, Karl A. Hall of the Penn-American A. C. of Worcester, D. M. Marino of the Alston A. A., and D. A. Hudson of Watertown, who finished twenty-third in 1926.

This year the runners will cover the full Marathon distance of 26 miles and 385 yards. While it was found impossible to stage the event on regulation distances a year ago, it is now found by actual measurement that the course was 176 yards short.

Professor Edward Sherry measured the course and as a result of his work the start has been moved back 176 yards from its start when the race got underway a year ago.

Golf Notes

By BILL GRIMES

At many of the local clubs, April 19 has been set aside as "Dan Horan Day." The revenue from these tournaments will be forwarded to A. Linde Fowler, who is treasurer of the Horan fund. Due to the popularity that Dan Horan enjoys among the golfers, there is no question but that every event staged for his benefit will draw a capacity attendance.

The Albemarle Golf Club is getting ready for its busiest season. Bill Hynes has arranged for the playing of every known variety of golf tournament. Albemarle will open its season on the 19th with a "Patriots' Day" and watch these Albemarlers turn out and do their bit for good old "Derby Dan."

As there are many new players on the Women's Golf Association of Boston district teams, the brand of golf will be faster than ever and the fight for the championship will be close as five of the teams are very evenly matched, with Central being favored to repeat.

Among the newcomers to the W. O. A. team match play are Miss Olive Buttrick of Concord and Miss Virginia Forrest of Vesper. Miss Buttrick will be with Central and Miss Forrest has cast her lot with Miss R. D. Wareham of Norton Links team. Until this season neither Miss Buttrick or Miss Forrest would have to team match play but as they are looking to the W. G. A. championships at Woodland they felt that the competitive experience would work out to their advantage.

The acquisition of Miss Ruth Batcheder to the Country Club team will greatly strengthen the three Park aggregation. Miss Batcheder is one of the top notchers of the W. O. A. and should win many points for the Country Club.

Mrs. E. C. Stone of the Belmont Spring Country Club will be watching this season. Mrs. Stone spent the Winter abroad and scored well on almost every start. Mrs. Stone was forced out of the W. G. A. championships at Kernwood last season by an appendix operation.

The annual meeting of the Boston Newspapermen's Golf Association will be held tomorrow. As Jack Kerrison, Tom Fogarty and the other officers performed their duties unreprochfully last season, it is doubtful if there will be any changes.

Spring Diet for Children That Are Growing

By MARTHA LEE

IT is true that a mother spends far more energy managing her home than the average husband in his eight or nine hours of work. But the little man of the family, or the little lady—children of school age—spend energy almost as fast as a squirrel in his whirling cage.

Children of early school age (that is, between six and twelve years old) are as active as regular "injuns," and their little bodies are regular engines—human engines with food the only fuel to speed them on to the station of healthy maturity.

If mother should romp and play, as her children do, climb trees and fences, play crack-the-whip, or any of the various strenuous games of youth she would find that her youngsters burn up more energy in one day than she in two.

Scientists claim that even a baby in its cry uses up energy as fast as a man working at hard labor, therefore, baby's food should be even more nutritious than an adult's and easier to digest, so it is easy to see why the active youngster of school age needs wholesome fuel food and a carefully supervised diet. No child has a fair chance in life who does not have a proper diet.

Proper food, frequent bathing and plenty of sleep are the birthright of the child of six to twelve just as they are the baby's. The school age is the time during which the greatest development of both brain and body takes place, is perhaps the most vital period of all the seven ages of man.

Every mother is duty bound to consider carefully both the body building and fuel or energy-producing elements in the food she serves for her children. Quantity will not make up for the absence of quality, and even children reared with all the advantages wealth can provide may be undernourished unless mother points the way over the health-bridge, whose foundations are good, substantial and nutritious foods and milk, cereals, bread, butter, eggs, fruits and vegetables.

I am going to give you a sample spring diet for a week for children from six to twelve years. For the younger children use more milk and a meat

Glasses Protect Eyes

By Charles A. L. Reed, M. D., Former President of the American Medical Association.

UNDER civilized conditions the proportion of people who wear glasses is very high and not a few wearers live in a state of rebellion against the necessity—a state which may vary from quite annoyance to acute irritation.

There are people who would take off their glasses at every possible opportunity, but always have an uneasy feeling that they should be gaining momentary ease at the expense of their eyesight.

Dr. MacCallan (Post Graduate Medical Journal) states that whether glasses may be left off sometimes depends upon the conditions for which they have been prescribed.

Those whose sight for near objects is diminished with advancing years and who, in fact, have grown them a prescription for reading glasses not only need not but should not wear their glasses for distance vision

A person under forty, however whose errors of sight are not due to the loss of elasticity which comes with middle age, whose powers of accommodation are still good and whose long or near sight is due to a slight defect in the shape of his eyes, wears lenses to bring external objects to a focus on his retina without making him strain his focussing muscles.

People who have long sight and astigmatism may discontinue their glasses intermittently as they like, provided that they have suffered no loss of muscular balance and that they have no headaches or other signs of ocular fatigue.

Those, however, who suffer from headaches and other disabilities should wear their glasses continuously.

To ladies who object to wearing their glasses continuously for cosmetic reasons, Dr. MacCallan gives the following advice:

"There are twenty-four hours in the day, during which about eight are spent in bed, where certainly you are not required to wear glasses To a less extent hours, which are certainly not all spent in society, the majority being spent at home. If you wear your glasses during ten or twelve hours of this time, it is possible that you may avoid any more eye fatigue, but remember that your eyes will always require the addition of glasses to make it a perfect optical appliance."

LIZARD skin decorates everything. This is how it is used on a smart walking shoe of beige kid in a golden tan shade. The lizard is varnished to the brilliance of patent leather and is the same shade as the shoe.

Gauntlet gloves are an amusing fancy and this one is in sand-colored suede lined with brick red with a deep turn-over cuff showing the contrast. It is decorated with one beige tassel of narrow strands of the suede.

Parisia made this attractive sandal shoe of black satin for Regina Cornier, who wears it at the Theatre Michel. It is bordered with narrow bands of pink and blue kid that are interlaced up the sides of the instep, which is crossed with a handsome jewelled buckle of rhinestones.

Maria Alphonsine is responsible for this hat that brings out the present fashion for contrast. It is in beige and black felt with a flared band round the turban-shaped crown and a piece of scalloped black felt pinced across the back, fitting closely to the neck line.

Alexandrine makes this amusing glove which is stitched with gold on beige suede. The long cuff, worn slightly rucked on the arm, is cut into curved bands forming openwork and edged with gold stitching.

Inspiration on Tap

By WINIFRED BLACK

WHERE in the world do they go, all these things we call thoughts?

I had one just now, and it was a good one, too. I wonder I never had it before.

Cheerful and encouraging, something rather funny about it. Yet there was a core of inner meaning—it flashed into my head just as the Tall Woman was trying to say goodby.

She starts and turns around and comes back and then sits down on the edge of the chair. She gets up and goes to the door and just as you think she's going to step out she comes back again.

All the time you know she wants to go, but just simply can't manage to get away.

You'd like to have her stay and spend the afternoon, if she could, but in that case you'd like to sit into the hall and telephone. You'd like to slip downstairs and give an order or so, and you'd like to get out your little Russian blouse effect you are embroidering and put in your time to good advantage.

Or you'd like to have her go and be done with it. Then you'd settle down to your real work or go and see your sick friend, or write some letters that really need writing.

Dear me, what a lot of time and nervous energy she does waste when she starts to go—the Tall Woman.

Now she's started the thought—no, I can't catch it again, it's gone—forever, as far as I'm concerned.

I wonder if the Tall Woman has it? Maybe she caught it up out of the air, just as we do radio messages. I wonder if I'll recognize it when I see it again, that queer little whimsical thought, or will I just wonder "why didn't I think of that before"?

I know a man who says no thought is ever lost. He says your brain is just like a nice competent filing cabinet. Everything you know and everything you hear, and everything you wonder is filed away there all in order, and the clever people are the ones who never lose the key to the cabinet.

They can always unlock the door and put in a thumb and pull out a plum, just whenever they feel like it.

Dull people have the filing cabinets, too, but they lose the key, and that's that.

What Is Beyond Life?

By LUCY LOWELL.

MANY college students have taken their own lives.

The first of the suicides, an honor student twenty years old, left a note explaining that he wished to find out how things are over there." And he set a definite time when he would communicate with a fraternity brother, passing along the news of what he found on the other side of the grave.

The fraternity brother waited long and eagerly, but there was no communication.

And there will be none.

Spirit, the essential part of the ego which lives on after the body has become cold and dead, is not interested in the things that seem all important in the human self.

The fraternity brothers therefore would not be able to understand the language which their friend's spirit forced out into the beyond by a reckless, flailing hand would use, even if that spirit could come back to talk with them.

And it is doubtful if his spirit would come back, even if it could This world is a training school for mortals on their way to the forever: its petty concerns exert no hold upon the essence being which has passed far beyond it.

What student, having entered college, feels any interest in the speculations and problems of the lower grammar grades? These problems may be examined and resolved the speculations continued unsatisfied. But they no longer concern him; they are apart from anything he needs or cares for.

Cold-Water Tinting

(Copyright 1927)

There are lots of "prepared inks" for home tinting of your dainty lingerie, but did you ever try real dye-tinting with a real dye? You get glorious effects when you begin with the true tones that only real dyes can impart to fabrics!

An ounce of the actual dye powder is only fifteen cents at any druestore. Sift a bit in cold water—dip the garment—and it's done. Only, you'll have a smooth, even tone just exactly like materials have when bought; none of that streaky look; never weak or "washy" no matter how much you dilute or lighten the color. Furthermore, you can "set" the tint if you want, by merely having the water boil.

Ten Thousand Messages

TEN thousand bottle messages were released upon the waters of the New York harbor to determine tide and current actions. In the bottles were slips requesting finders to write in the date and place of discovery.

CHAPTER XLIV.

Nothing happened for a week. That is, nothing of any importance to Bobbie and her career as a motion-picture actress. Not a telephone call from a studio. Not a word from the house on the hill where Lottie Schultz and her famous husband lived. Not a word or a sign from Gus MacCloud.

Then, on Saturday afternoon, everything began to happen at once. Things often do, in just that way.

At four o'clock, Bobbie was coming slowly up Las Palmas street towards Mrs. Mangan's house with her arms full of little bundles—a quarter pound of butter, a pot of peanut butter, six poppy seed rolls, some bologna in greasy gray paper wrappings, a half pint of cream, a half pound of coffee in a red sack.

This was the food that was to last her over Sunday.

She had begun to dread Sundays of late. They were gray dull deserts of time, and not at all like the Sundays at home that had begun with breakfast and church, and ended with a drive and supper with Andy Jerrold. Somehow she expected a letter from Andy today.

She seldom saw Gus on Sundays. He always went to the studio for several hours on Sunday, and often spent the whole day there. To him and to Roy Schultz Sunday seemed to be a working day just like Monday or Tuesday.

"I wonder whether they really spend all that time at Magnifico or not," Bobbie mused, remembering the story Lottie Schultz had told her about their wild party at Monica's hateful little flat.

She was half-ashamed of herself for distrusting Gus, especially when he seemed so much in love with her. But she was.

Not only that, but she knew she never had fully trusted him. There was so much of the male flirt in him—and then, did a woman ever trust a really handsome man? A man who was as attractive to the opposite sex as Gus was?

"I always trusted Andy Jerrold,' she said to herself, "and he was every bit as good looking as Gus. But he just wasn't the kind that chases women, I guess, and Gus is. That's the difference." Then she suddenly remembered that new secretary of Andy's. The one that was so wonderful and such a "speedy merchant," and she frowned.

When she reached the house she found not only Andy's letter, but a small square box with a "special delivery" stamp upon it. It was postmarked "Los Angeles."

She opened the box and within it reposed Aunt Gertrude's brooch! The "dirty" diamonds in it winked up at her like watery eyes.

"For cats sake!" she cried aloud in her astonishment.

She knew, of course, that Monica must have repented of her perfidy, and decided to send them back. Or perhaps she had been afraid that Bobbie would set a detective on her trail—on her trail and the trail of the missing diamonds.

She Couldn't Be Sure That Monica Had Taken Brooch

And yet she couldn't be absolutely sure that Monica had taken the brooch. She had no proof and yet she knew that she had, somehow.

"Anyway, I have it back," she thought, slipping it into the pocket of her serge dress that was becoming very shabby at the seat and glass at the elbows. "So I may as well wipe the whole thing of the slate and forget it."

She would never speak of the brooch to Monica, she made up her mind. For after all, Monica was what she was—and she couldn't help being Monica Mont, gold-digging, stingy, and very clever and mean as a spider could help being a spider.

"Poor thing!" Bobbie went on thinking. "She probably never had anyone to teach her what's right and wrong." For ever since she had heard Monica speak in that common, gutter-snipe way the other day, she had known exactly what kind of a girl Monica was. Probably she had come from some back-alley slum somewhere, and pulled herself up from its depths.

And it certainly was something in her favor that she had sent back the brooch.

"Now, I can sell it to Gus. Or at least borrow some money on it," she said to herself, "I'll telephone him as soon as I've read Andy's letter."

Andy's letter, A warm glow of happiness spread over Bobbie as she tore open the long narrow envelope. It was good to hear from him. It was almost like the sound of a voice from home in her ears, the touch of a warm, friendly hand on her shoulder.

"And yet I don't love Andy. Not a bit, really," she thought. "But I do like him—more than I like anybody."

That was it. She liked Andy, but she loved Gus MacCloud.

To like a person one had to admire him, respect him, trust him. And she respected and trusted Andy.

But love, it seemed, had nothing to do with admiration, respect, and trust. It was a feeling that thrilled you when you thought of the person you were in love with. And you didn't even have to look up to him in order to love him. You loved him in spite of his faults.

At least that was the way Bobbie Ransom figured the thing out with Andy Jerrold's letter in her hand.

But as she read it, she began to doubt that she really liked Andy Jerrold, after all. Certainly she did not feel friendly and warm toward him, as she reached the end of the single typewritten page.

"My dear Bobsie," he had typed, "It's too bad of you to be jealous of my new secretary. I had just about made up my mind that you cared so little for me that any secretary of mine, however beautiful, wouldn't interest you at all, much less make you jealous.

"However, I feel sure that by this time your jealous mood his passed, and that by this time you again look upon me as a brother. And so I can tell you that Miss Phillips (that's her name) begins to look to me like the nice girl you've always been advising me to look around for. She really is nice, and she has brown eyes like yours and her hair is red. Not fiery red, but that deep auburn with gold glints in it—"

Bobbie Reads the Letter Sent Her by Andy

"Deep auburn with gold glints in it! I bet she has a henna rinse every Saturday of her life!" said Bobbie through set teeth as she read that bit.

She read on: "I probably never would have noticed her hair, however, if I hadn't noticed her eyes first. They were so like yours—"

"Like mine! I like his nerve!" sputtered Bobbie, and went on to the end:

"—and as you know, I've always had a weakness for brown eyes. That, I suppose, is because my own are gray. They say that opposites are always attracted to each other, you know. Anyway, I hope that this satisfies your curiosity concerning Lorraine Phillips, and that you will write to me soon again. By the way, did you like the bracelet I sent you at Christmas, or perhaps you didn't get it.

"Cordially yours,

"ANDY."

Bobbie held the sheet of paper in her hands, looking down at it. But through and beyond its whiteness, she was seeing Andy Jerrold's gray eyes—steadfast, and yet not too grave and serious. Usually crinkled with laughter at the corners. Somehow or other, it made her dismal and unhappy to think of those gray eyes looking down into Lorraine Phillips' brown ones. Looking into anybody's eyes the way he used to look down into her own.

"I suppose any girl looking a man who's once been crazy about her," she thought. She tore the letter into tiny pieces.

As she stood watching them a messenger boy turned in at the walk. He had a sheaf of telegrams.

"Miss Roberta Ransom live here?" he asked, holding up one of them.

"I'm Miss Ransom." Bobbie told him, and took it from him.

It was from Andy.

"Wrote you fool letter. Please do not read it. but tear it up when it comes. Best love always

"ANDY."

"You're too late, old boy," she said to him in her heart, and she crumpled up the slip of yellow paper and tossed it down along with the "fool letter."

Then she went down to Hollywood boulevard, and sent him a telegram in answer to the one he had just sent her.

"Read letter before wire came," was what she wrote. "Sorry. I have always heard that red-headed women make the best wives. Congratulations."

She did not sign it. She knew that Andy would know who had sent it.

"And I guess it'll hold him for a while, too!" she told herself snappily, as she started back to Las Palmas street.

In the house, cool and shady after the February heat and glare, she went straight to the phone and called Gus MacCloud.

"Gus, I want you," she said to the other man when he answered the telephone, and her voice was the voice of an unhappy child, "I'm coming up."

"Sure—take a cab," he answered eagerly, "I'll be waiting for you."

Jacqueline Finds Herself Featured Strongly in the Day's News

teen years in prison. Eighteen months ago he was arrested for accosting a woman in the subway and served three months at Deer Island. In later years, the police say, he had become a drug addict himself, and was known as one of the most dangerous criminals at liberty in New England.

All of this produced inevitably, in the press, a sympathetic undertone in behalf of Julius Lupino which, however, did not extend to the District Attorney's office from where a curt statement was issued, tending to nullify any sentimentality.

"This case represents another gang killing in which the weaker man was cold-bloodedly murdered Lupino, this office has reason to believe, was connected with a gang engaged in a rum war with the associates of Barney Sugge. The prosecution of the case will not be influenced in the slightest by any trumped-up atmosphere of sob-stone chivalry."

But the sustaining item of interest—the feature to which the entire press unanimously responded—was the picturesque, swaggering interview given by Lupino from the Tombs.

"Yes, I killed him, and I'd do it again," Lupino told the reporters. "I'd do the same thing, or words, to anybody else that got fresh with Jacqueline Kay. I don't know whether that's self defense or not, boys, but that's the way I feel about it. No self-defense plea for me. If the jury wants to send me up I'll take my medicine.

"I was brought up in a rough-and-tumble scrap every day for existence. What education I've got I picked up in the hard school of experience. But there's one thing I learned when I was a kid that I have never forgot, and that is to respect a decent girl and always defend her.

"And I want to say a few words right now about Jacqueline Kay. I'd have given my right arm to a other out of a mess like this, but now that her name has come up I don't want anybody to misunderstand about her. I've seen a lot of women, but Jacqueline Kay is one of the purest, finest little girls on the face of the earth. She's just a kid that came from home with a wonderful voice and the ambition to make something out of herself.

"When she came to work in my cabaret I told her, and I told every body else around the place, that I was going to protect her like a big brother. Maybe I've had some dark experiences in my life, but I know a good woman when I see one and there's no man living can get fresh with her in my presence. Sure I'm just a big rough guy, but I first got these principles from my poor old mother who taught me, as a kid, never to stand for any rough stuff around a lady. I didn't know that it was Barney the Lamp I was dealing with when the trouble started and I didn't care who he was.

"Something came over me and I didn't realize exactly what I was doing until it was all over. If they want to lock a man up, and maybe send him to the penitentiary for ridding the streets of a vicious criminal—if it's a crime to defend a decent woman in Boston—then I haven't got anything more to say.

"I suppose some of you boys are wondering whether I'm in love with Miss Kay or not. Well, I am. She's the finest little woman that ever stepped in shoe leather, and she's the first woman in my life I ever loved. I'd marry her tomorrow if she'd have me, and if I was free.

"I want to say something more, boys. You know as well as I do, that there's a mighty hard bunch of women chasers hanging around certain parts of Boston. Well, if I get out of jail anybody like that better keep away from this little lady, or they'll have me to settle with. I'm giving fair warning now. I, Julius Lupino, forbid these rounders with their contempt of American womanhood, to go near this little girl. I see too much of night life not to know its perils, and sitting here in my cell I made up my mind that if ever I get out I'm going to see that at least one virtuous girl is not dragged down by the wolves I mean. Now I don't want to give any of you newspaper men the wrong impression about Miss Kay and me. She's not in love with me, and I don't suppose she would ever consider marrying a man of my type. Nevertheless, what I have told you comes straight from the heart, and that's the way I feel about it."

The following day was Sunday, and an eminent clergyman, from his pulpit, took occasion to refer to the remarkable chivalry contained in Julius Lupino's statement to the press.

"If some silk hatted millionaire in Boston felt the way this man, struggling up from the slime fields, ours would be a cleaner city and a safer city for our young people."

"Of all the bunk!" the disgust attorney declared sarcastically to one of his assistants. "Lupino couldn't think of that stuff if he devoted the rest of his life to it. I know the earmarks. The whole thing was written for him by the smartest criminal lawyer in Boston—Abe Gordon. It's a reckless bid for public sympathy."

Mrs. Beeckman Explains Correct Manners

BY MRS. CORNELIA B. BEECKMAN.

DEAR MISS BEECKMAN:

Would you please advise me the correct way to answer an engagement announcement? The one I received just reads:

Mr. James Smith
Miss Mary Brown

I am a friend of the girl, but not of the young man. Or, Mrs. Beeckman, is it necessary to answer by writing a note, or would a telephone call be just as correct?

L. E.

AN engagement announcement of any kind seems to call for a note from us, telling our friend how happy we are at the news of her happiness for his happiness, if it is the groom we know). It is reasonable that, if we are included in the list of friends who have been sent engagement announcements, we should acknowledge this tribute to our friendship. The note need not be long, but it should be friendly and sincere and articulate. "I send you the very best wishes for your happiness" is the basis, of course, of such a note, and to that is added any comments that are appropriate, according to the degree of friendship between the writer and the reader.

A telephone call is not the best of taste in a case like this. You see, an acknowledgment of the kind, indeed of any kind, should, as much as it is possible, be "in kind" with the form sent to us. Of course, after we have written the note of good wishes, we may telephone the young lady and "chat" about the engagement.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

WHEN a man asks a girl for a dance and does not know enough to ask permission of her escort what should the girl do? Should she dance with him or refuse. Should she perhaps refer him to her escort, in some manner other than introduction, in order to give him a hint? If so, what are the proper words to use to refer him to her escort?

(2) Is it proper when a girl's club gives a dance for the girl to ask a man to take her and for her to pay for the ticket?

A READER.

THIS is a very good question, and I am glad that you asked it. I think that the girl can remind the man in a most graceful and kind way of his omission, for he may not really know, or he may temporarily be remiss. Men are, as you know, often careless about this kind of thing, as, indeed, women are, too, and there is, therefore, no reason why she should refuse to dance with the man

All she needs to do is turn graciously to her partner and say, "Do you mind, Bob?"

(2) Since the girl is one of the hostesses, it is quite proper for her to invite a man to accompany her and she should, since she is a co-hostess, buy both tickets.

Advice to Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

TELL HIM THE TRUTH

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I go with a young man who says he loves me and wants me to tell him the same. I never tell him, because I am not sure whether I love him. Yet at times I feel that I do love him.

Is this fickleness? Or is it because I am so young that I don't know my own mind?

The fear always lurks in my thoughts that, if I tell him I love him, some day I may meet someone else whom I might care more for. If this should happen, I wouldn't break my word to the other young man, and then I would be unhappy. I wouldn't break my word once it was given, because he is so nice to me and it would hurt him.

Please tell me what to do.

How to Have Soft, Pretty White Hands

Many women will undoubtedly be glad to know how they may have beautiful, white, soft, pretty hands regardless of the work they have to do. The secret lies in rubbing a little Ice-Mint into the hands occasionally, preferably just before retiring at night. In the morning you will be agreeably surprised at the pleasant transformation that has been wrought by even a single application. Ice-Mint is made from a Japanese product that is simply marvelous for its beautifying properties whether used on the hands or face. Regardless of what kind of work a woman does she should have pretty hands as they are really the true marks of refinement. A few applications of Ice-Mint will actually make any woman proud of her hands and skin. It costs little and is sold and recommended by good druggists everywhere.

Women's Old-Time Hygiene

Disappearing—New way discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

THE worries and fear of the uncertain hygienic ways of yesterday are rapidly passing. 8 in 10 better class women employ a new way called Kotex.

✓ Kotex discards like tissue. No laundry, no disposal bother.

Being 5 times as absorbent as ordinary cotton "pads," it permits lightest gowns and frocks without danger. Dance, motor, go about for hours without a moment's doubt.

Deodorizes, too, thus ending all fear of offense. Doctors urge this way.

Many stores have Kotex already wrapped on counters, ready for you to pick up without even asking for it.

Try today and you'll never again risk uncertain old ways. Box of 12 costs only a few cents. Be sure you get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

GO AFTER A GOOD EDUCATION AND BECOME BROAD

Your education is not measured entirely in terms of shop.

Your ability along any special line is better for knowledge along a good many different lines.

The different subjects included in a curriculum leading up to any special degree may seem superfluous to you.

To study something which develops a different side of your understanding makes of you a broader specialist.

But the judgment, the concentration, the skill of your chosen profession may be enhanced by seemingly unrelated subjects.

All this takes too much time, you think.

You consider yourself practical.

Expert, highly experienced educators know what subjects lead to these specialized objectives.

The man who refuses to take time to study general subjects because he thinks he will not use them in his business afterwards is often too narrow-minded to get to the top in any certain profession or trade.

DAILY SHORT STORY

CORINNE HAMILTON was in a most distressed state of mind. It was a great effort for her to preside as president of the senior class that afternoon, although the two hours the meeting lasted was a real godsend apparently to her pals and classmates, who had no idea that her mind was not on the business in hand.

"Sorry," she whispered to Gladys Emmons, who had asked an absent heart, "can't possibly help you out now. Got to bone over Natural Science—quiz tomorrow, you know."

But, Corinne, you're a shark at Natural Science," Gladys answered, with a smart further argument. Corinne shot into a sweater, picked up a book under her arm as convincing proof of her desire for study and slammed the door of the room on a portent of protest.

"I'm park," she told Gladys. "Guess I can be alone there and think."

It was only a few minutes from the college grounds and Corinne walked rapidly. Tears were forlorn to Corinne. She did not know how to cope with them, nor with the lump in her throat which threatened to choke her. At last she reached a bench back from the walkway, decided to an extent by shrubbery. It seemed an awful thing that this was the only place she could go in her grief. She didn't dare linger in the dormitories, no solicitude there—she was much too popular.

Oh, to think that she was being jilted—she Corinne Hamilton—proud, modern girl that she was. She, who had always been sure of herself, capable of coping with and overcoming anything but this! She ought to do. She [illegible] to Harrison and say, "You've changed [illegible]. I know it's someone else [illegible] right—let's call it off."

But she couldn't do that. She couldn't for three [illegible] she loved Harrison Brooks, and she knew that Amille Ellsworth was not the sort of wife [illegible] to marry—and third, well, she just wouldn't give him up.

Corinne's silver lining came up proudly; into her gloom came a sudden fire [illegible] girls called a "nerve," always calm in the [illegible] pride and the charm of [illegible] lines, seemed now to [illegible] a flame which [illegible] touch. A faint throbbing [illegible] in her throat a tiny blue [illegible] she would not give [illegible] she loved him so!

"Hello, Corrie!" a pleasant deep voice cut into her musings, and she started.

"Harrison," she almost gasped his name, and seeing the [illegible] spring into his lean, bronzed [illegible] she was vexed that she had been unable to hide her confusion.

"I came out here, where I could study," she said [illegible]. "The girls were making fudge in our room and I couldn't concentrate in all the chatter."

"Let's see what you're having to bone." He dropped upon the seat beside her. "Natural Science—thought you were well up on that. Let's see." He took the book from her lap and glanced at the open page. "The May-fly—rises to the surface of the water at twilight—sheds its skin and becomes a full-fledged fly—One glorious spell of soaring—is dead before the next day's sunset."

Corinne was surprised at the gravity which crept into his tone over the last fragment of the sentence. But she did not raise her eyes. Just sat there, her large, capable hands with their tapering fingers clasped in her lap. He would say something clever now and laugh deeply and melodiously, breaking silence between them.

But he didn't. He only said this: "One glorious spell of flying! Poor little May-fly!"

She did not look up then, but Harrison Franklin sat in an abstracted mood, his big black eyes on the smiling sun that glowed in fiery radiance through the trees.

And Corinne forced herself to an action she considered bold. [illegible] touched his hands very lightly, a caressing touch, and smiled wistfully. He only sighed and arose.

"I won't keep you from studying, Sorry, but I shan't be able to see you tonight, Corrie. Got to go over to Mrs. Howard's to a dinner dance. I—well, I couldn't refuse, the way she asked."

"Oh, that's all right." As she answered she was wishing fiercely that he would not bother to flounder excuses. She felt that he cheapened her—as she had just cheapened herself in that little intimate touch of affection. And she knew now that she had lost Harrison Franklin—lost him to—

"Don't you think——" he looked down at her intently, and his deep voice was tinged with a new emotion. "don't you think, Corrie, that Amille Ellsworth is a most bewitchingly beautiful girl?"

If he had suddenly struck her in the face, Corrine could not have been more hurt and crushed with grief. "She's lovely, Harrison," she managed to say, and the words choked in her throat so that she had to turn from him suddenly. "Lovely," she heard herself repeat helplessly.

"I thought you'd understand," he said. "Goodbye, Corinne!"

"Harrison Franklin is giving Mrs. Howard's niece quite a rush," Charlotte Means said. "Never thought Harry'd fall for such a frivolous society belle!"

"But she's just about the loveliest creature I've seen," Helen Wells remarked. "Small and fairylike, Dresden china beauty. Lustrous black eyes—my!"

"Saw her last night at the Green Owl, with Harrison. She seemed to be enjoying herself like a child—and Harry was certainly wonderful to her!" Helen broke off suddenly and looked at Corinne queerly. "I've been wondering, Corrie—we—that is, I thought at one time you and Harrison—well, I understand he's going in with his father after he graduates and he'll be right well fixed. And I imagined——"

Of course, something definite had to be said by one of them. He had asked her to marry him, and she had accepted him. Well, he must not think her a girl he could simply drop when he tired of her. So Corinne swallowed her pride and telephoned him next morning, asking him to see her at the 11 o'clock intermission.

"Oh, Corinne, I can't today!" His voice sounded harassed. "I've just been called by Mrs. Howard—she asked me to come right over; something's happened!"

"Oh, by all means go," snapped Corinne, now thoroughly outraged and, angry. "But remember, Harrison, you must see me about something—and very soon!"

Morning passed, classes passed. Corinne moved abstractedly about her duties, but cold and relentless rage possessed her. Oh, she would see him!

Shadows of evening were creeping across the campus when Helen and Charlotte burst into her room breathless. "Amille Ellsworth is dead!" they cried in chorus.

"Dead!" Corrine repeated the word in amazement and horror.

"Yes," confirmed Helen gravely. "Didn't you know about her, Corrie? She had some curious heart trouble and she knew she couldn't live very long. They say she refused to go to a sanatorium where she might prolong her days, saying she would not wear away the little time left to live, in solitude—because she loved life so! And oh, Corrie!" continued Helen, "Harrison's waiting downstairs to see you. He's been at Howard's all day. Amille was fond of him, and Mrs. Howard called him this morning—she wanted to say 'au revoir' to him, he said."

But Corinne was halfway down the stairs as Helen finished speaking. Instinctively they sought the shaded park, where one could see the flaming sun through the trees. It was getting in a bed of fleecy clouds and shadows of night were stealing over the hedgerows. Harrison Franklin looked at the glowing sun. "One glorious spell of soaring," he said softly. "At least she felt it glorious—poor little May-fly!"

Corinne realized then that she was crying. "I'm sorry," she said humbly. "I didn't realize—didn't know. Forgive me!"

He turned and smiled as one might smile at a little child in affectionate understanding. "You've doubted me, Corrie, and you've suffered dear! If I had realized before this morning I could have explained—I couldn't then. Anyway, I believe that now our love will be bigger—more worthy, because one poor little May-fly fluttered across our way."

And the sun slowly dropped below the horizon as he bent to kiss away her tears.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

PHYSICIANS have had so much trouble collecting their bills lately that one surgeon has hired a credit man. He looks into your financial condition before the doctor looks into your health.

TOO many people are getting sick who can't afford it.

SOME doctors won't lift a knife without a deposit.

THEY want 20 per cent. down and the balance before you come out of the ether.

ONE surgeon has a cash register on the operation table.

INCISIONS are expensive, but if your references are all right, he'll be glad to open you on credit.

HE'LL remove anything you want on deferred payments.

ONE man was such a spendthrift that he went to the hospital the other day and ran up a bill of $1,200.

THE doctor removed so many things that the poor fellow had himself audited.

HE wanted to see if he balanced.

IT took a public accountant three days to add up the stitches.

AFTER this he's just going to have himself darned.

FANCY sewing is too expensive.

HE can hire a seamstress for $3 a day.

HE'S sore because the doctor made the incisions up and down instead of cutting him on the bias.

AND for $1,100 his sides should have been pleated.

BUT it's his own fault. He didn't give the doctor a pattern.

OPERATIONS are all right for rich folks, but the poor people have to go through life as is.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS---BY HELEN ROWLAND

* * *

When you see a bridegroom walking down the aisle, you may be reasonably sure that he is following his own inclinations.

* * *

But when you see a bride treading the flower-strewn path to the altar, you never can be certain that she is not running AWAY from something!

* * *

A man may be blindfolded and backed into marriage, or lured, steered or eased into it, under the anaesthetic of a Springtime passion. But only a woman can be DRIVEN into it with her eyes wide open!

* * *

A man usually marries in order to GET something that he thinks he wants—love, a home, or a particular woman. But a girl, alas, often marries in order to ESCAPE something that she thinks she doesn't want.

* * *

At 16, many a girl takes the fatal plunge into a foolish marriage just in order to escape "Mother's nagging," "Dad's restrictions" or the boredom of another year at school.

To her, marriage looks like a gorgeous lark, with the beautiful promise of a chance to "be herself" and "lead her own life."

* * *

At 25, many a foolish young thing rushes into matrimony with a man twice her age in order to escape WORK! To her, marriage looks like one long, grand vacation, a glorious and eternal graft. And not even all the alimony-fights that brighten the morning newspapers can shatter her illusion.

* * *

At 30, if her "love-ship" has not come in, many a girl desperately snatches the first "life-preserver" who offers to save her from spinsterhood. She is literally driven into marriage by the compassionate urgings of her patronizing married friends!

* * *

At 40, many a perfectly sane woman marries just in order to escape boredom, and to acquire a permanent "theatre-beau" and restaurant companion, only to discover that she has gotten a jailer, who goes to sleep every evening after dinner.

But the Prize Dumb-bell is the middle-aged widow or divorcee, who seeks to insure her Indian Summer against solitude by marrying some sheik half her age!

HAVE COLOR IN CHEEKS

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid — tongue coated — appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets — a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 20 years of study.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They start the bile and overcome constipation. Take nightly and note the pleasing results. Millions of boxes sold yearly. 15c, 30c, 60c. All druggists.

The Best Laxative He Ever Tried

Mr. Wm. Towner, New York, writes: "Never have I felt better in my life. CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS keep my bowels active; headaches and indigestion never bother me now. I enjoy my sleep and get up refreshed, with a clear head ready for a day's work."

Millions all over the world have found this doctor's prescription a relief for every day ailments. These purely vegetable laxative pills, are small, easy to swallow and moves the bowels in a gentle manner free from pain. They are not habit forming and do not contain Calomel, Mercury or poisonous drugs. CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS red pkg. 25c. and 75c. All druggists. Try to-night—To-morrow refreshed.

His Regularity Is What Counts!

Age need not bring on sluggishness — and won't, if you give the system a tiny bit of calcium now and then. Calcium cleanses the system as no cathartic can, with none of the after-effects that make salts so injurious. They form no habit—except as they gradually induce the bowels to daily, natural evacuation without aid. Calcium wafers are the best insurance against auto-intoxication.

Free!

Almost every druggist store in America has Stuart's calcium wafers in stock. They cost only a dime! Or write for a free box postpaid by F. A. Stuart Co. Dep't. N45, Marshall, Mich.

CASTORIA

When Baby Complains.

There are many ways a baby has of expressing any pain or irregularity or digression from its normal condition of health and happiness. A short sharp cry, a prolonged irritated cry, Restlessness, a constant turning of the head or of the whole body, fretful. In these and other ways a baby tells you there is something wrong. Most mothers know that a disordered stomach, or bowels that do not act naturally are the cause of most of baby's sufferings. A call for the doctor is the first thought, but in the event of any delay there should be ready at hand a safe remedy such as Fletcher's Castoria.

Castoria has been used for baby's ailments for over 30 years and has merited the good will of the family physician in a measure not equaled by any other baby's medicine because of its harmlessness and the good results achieved.

Remember this: Castoria is essentially a baby's remedy and [illegible]re-all for every member of the family. What might help [illegible]oo often dangerous when given to a babe.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S PLATFORM FOR BOSTON AND NEW ENGLAND

For BOSTON: 1—Clean streets.
2—Solution of traffic and parking problems.
3—Better pay for honest public service.
4—An airport SECOND TO NONE.
5—Erection of a MUNICIPAL AUDITORIUM to compare with any in the land; in order that Boston, properly supplied with first-class hotels, may be the premier convention city of the U. S. A.

For NEW ENGLAND: 1—Weld the six States into a unit through the activities of the New England Council, thus creating a community consciousness.
2—Promote intercourse with Central and South America, encouraging New Englanders to "turn to the sea" again.
3—Keeping everlastingly at the job of telling the rest of the country all about our unique advantages as Summer and Winter Playground of the Nation.
4—Foster the prosperity of our industries through (1) greater efficiency in production and (2) the use of modern methods in merchandising.
5—Promote in every way such natural resources as forests, water powers and fisheries.
6—Assist New England agriculture to better marketing methods.

"GROWTH IS THE ONLY EVIDENCE OF LIFE"

—CARDINAL NEWMAN

Appearing on the first page of yesterday's American was a six months' statement of circulation of the Boston Evening American required by the Government.

This statement discloses the most phenomenal increase of circulation ever recorded in New England newspaper history.

The last statement, which appeared September 30, 1926, disclosed the healthiest growth of circulation in the history of the Boston American; but the figures of March 31, 1927, have surpassed this record.

Such a phenomenal increase in the circulation of a daily newspaper is susceptible to but one explanation—a growing popular appreciation of the news and entertainment value of the Boston Evening American.

This statement shows a 20 per cent. increase in circulation over the figures published one year ago; or 50,000 additional readers, of whom 40,000 live within Metropolitan Boston. It has been achieved by a steady growth which persisted throughout the year, and not as the result of spasmodic effort or special drives for circulation.

There are in Greater Boston approximately 400,000 families. This statement discloses that in 50 per cent. of these 400,000 homes the American is read regularly. This spells for the publishers of the Boston Evening American a great opportunity, and a vast responsibility.

For the advertisers who seek to reach this huge number of families, the circulation of the Boston Evening American likewise offers an opportunity, the neglect of which cannot be justified.

This six months' statement of the Boston Evening American shows the largest city circulation of any afternoon daily newspaper ever published in the City of Boston, at any price; even surpassing the city circulation of the Boston Evening American when it was sold for a penny.

Honeymoon Air-Express

Wedding Journey by Mail Plane a "Wonder," in 1927, but Just You Wait Twenty Years!

"They left the East Boston Airport at 6:15 on the New York mail plane for Hadley Field, New Brunswick, N. J., on the first lap of their honeymoon journey."

So reads, in part, the newspaper account of the wedding of a lovely Melrose Highlands girl—all Melrose Highlands girls are sweet and pretty—and a young Brookline physician.

Their picture in the daily news testifies to the comparative newness of flying in America. Twenty years from now, the June procession of newlyweds from altar to Airport will be so big that the newspapers will carry scarce a mention of the "honeymoon air-express."

Early in the present month, the first night-flying air passenger route in America began operation from Boston. * * * For the first time in the history of the city the airplane has been used for express service by a retail store, the C. F. Hovey Company. * * * Mr. W. Irving Bullard gives a luncheon in the air to the six winners of a Y. M. C. A. canvass for funds.

Still a toy, to the great majority of Americans, still a "wonder," as the telephone was to their grandfathers well into the Eighties, although it has been estimated, as Mr. Porter H. Adams reminds us, that "any man whose time is worth $25 a day cannot afford NOT to use an airplane" on business trips as long as from Boston to Chicago.

Well, and what has become of the legislative bill extending and improving the landing field in East Boston? It has been embodied, we learn from the State House, in a bill to establish a Special Commission on Aviation.

The proposed commission will be UNPAID. It will consist of one senator, two representatives and four other members to be designated by the Governor. They will be without funds, except for such clerical assistance as they can obtain for not more than $1,000.

These seven commissioners are to:

Consider what policy the Commonwealth should pursue with regard to aviation.

Consider existing State aircraft regulations, with a view to making the same conform to existing Federal regulations.

Investigate the advisibility of the Commonwealth co-operating with municipalities in the establishment or improvement of municipal aircraft landing fields.

Consider means and methods to PROMOTE aviation in this Commonwealth.

In addition to these subjects the Commission, as has been intimated, will take up the matter of extending the landing field in East Boston. Much work is cut out for it, for its report must be filed not later than December 1st.

Massachusetts is not going up in the air, even on the subject of going up in the air. The commonwealth is going into the subject with characteristic slowness but characteristic SURENESS. The proposed survey will be extensive as well as careful. It should determine not alone the utility but the needs and requirements of aviation locally; and that is about all that could be asked for at this time.

The present legislature has shown a real interest in the subject of aviation; and THAT is encouraging, too.

Let's keep within hailing distance of the procession.

Fun for LITTLE George

A THOUGHTLESS child is worse than a THANKLESS child, sometimes. Ask the King and Queen of England. They do everything to make the royal family dear to the British heart. Queen Mary wears long dresses and hats that do NOT come down over her eyes. They are such as General Grant would recognize.

The King wears his top hat, except when he goes to a cattle show. Then he wears a derby hat and pokes fat steers in the ribs. The Queen takes care of her granddaughter while her daughter-in-law is away. They are models.

But now their youngest son, Prince George, enters a Charleston competition in France, and what is worse, wins the championship. The contrasts between that sort of achievement and the deeds of Richard the Lion Hearted is too great. The British don't like it.

SUSPENDERS HAVE REASON IN FAVOR

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE merchant tailors of America get together once a year and issue edicts about what kind of clothes we should wear.

There is very little change in men's clothes, but the merchant tailors try to keep their fingers upon the pulse of what change there is.

They are now declaring that suspenders are coming back.

They seem to think that trousers hang more gracefully and look better when they are held up by suspenders than by a belt.

After all the belt is a precarious institution and if a man wants to be on the safe side he must, although wearing a belt, have also suspenders.

These much maligned articles of apparel have reason in their favor. The shoulders are the place to support the weight of one's clothes.

One beauty of men's attire is that they have never compressed the body at the waist nor hung from the waist, making an undue weight thereon.

If women are discarding skirts and shirt waists and hang their dingdads from the shoulders, why shouldn't men?

A lot of men are so architecturally constructed that their pantaloons will not stay up without suspenders and then they don't like the gap this discloses between their nether garments and their vest.

This takes no reckoning at all of gentlemen who go in their shirt sleeves and are inclined to put their thumbs under their suspenders while they are issuing various opinions.

What the backwoods statesman would do without a place to loop his hands while coruscating is not said.

The vest is no substitute, for often he does not have a vest.

The emancipated male will rejoice in the suspender, for as much as he abhors the gallows he is in favor of the galluses.

Of course having six buttons to which to attach the suspenders is a good deal of bother, but they assist in the artistic draping of the pantaloons, and if we must have trousers, which are the despair of artists, let us have them look as well as possible.

Every young man knows that the hardest article of his apparel to keep in ship shape is his trousers. In order to preserve the nice crease down the front it costs a good deal to send them every week to the tailor, and it is a good deal of a nuisance at night to put them between the mattresses. For our part, a man who wears only a belt looks always like he is coming loose. We remember David Warfield's chorus about "He's Losin' 'Em" and it seems as though the man with the belt could appropriately be singing this anthem.

Home of Diamonds

KIMBERLY, in South Africa, is today a city with broad streets, a fairly large residential section, and a number of banks, shops, theatres, churches and libraries. It was originally considered a part of the Orange Free State, but when diamonds were discovered, the British bought the land, which has since yielded many times the sum paid for it.

The first diamond in South Africa was found by a poor farmer's little boy. He had been playing on the bank of the Orange River and one day came home with a handful of pebbles he had picked up. A neighbor noticed the unusually pretty stone among the child's pebbles and offered to buy it. The child's mother thought it was just an ordinary pebble and told the man he might have it. The man sold it for five hundred pounds and thus started the diamond industry as we know it today. In 1869 a marvelous white diamond, weighing eighty-three carats, was picked up by a Hottentot, who received what he thought was a remarkable price—five hundred sheep, ten oxen, and a horse. The diamond was easily sold later at a great price.

The news of the discovery of this beautiful gem started a fortune rush, but it was not until the following year that anything important was discovered. In that year they found a fertile ground on the property of De Beers, where the richest mine in the world is now located.

Subsequent discoveries at Bulfontein, Du Toit's Pan, De Beers and Kimberly were so marvelous, that news of them spread all over the world and great numbers of people started in search of their fortune. Gradually there was need of capital and individuals had to give place to companies and the companies amalgamated. Cecil Rhodes formed the De Beers Consolidated Mines and bought out all rivals.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

SPEEDWAY.

STRANGE that the youngsters have not yet discovered the most attractive roller-skating rink in downtown BOSTON. The basin of the FROG POND. Emptied of water for its Spring cleaning, the basin shows a beautiful expanse of smooth concrete, nicely banked like a miniature automobile speedway.

TRAVEL.

Boston friends of FRANK S. DAVIS, manager of the Maritime Association of the Chamber of Commerce, have received word that he and MRS. DAVIS arrived "well and happy" at Funchal, Madeira, one of the interesting spots touched on the Mediterranean tour of the SS. Carinthia.

CHALLENGE.

Insurance and banking circles are showing keen interest in the proposed match race between JOHN R. DOWLING, representing the former, and HAROLD "HUB" CASSON, toeing the mark for the big check and hole men. DOWLING, former Deerfield track and football star, and CASSON, former University of Pennsylvania track star, are in training for the event which is the result of a friendly wager. The race may be run out of doors and a large gallery may surprise the contestants.

* * *

SURVEY.

EDDIE McMAHON, former University of Vermont football star and now engaged in making a survey of the huge Swift River dam and reservoir project, dropped in to say hello. He says the State of Massachusetts is undertaking an engineering operation of great scientific value and intricacy. Figures on the amount of work to be done will amaze any one interested in engineering.

ROSES.

One of the most admired shrubs in the recent flower show at Horticultural Hall was the yellow single-petalled rose "Hugonis," which PROFESSOR ERNEST H. WILSON of HARVARD brought back from one of his famous expeditions. This rose, the first specimens of which in this section were grown in Arnold Arboretum, is said to thrive in the climate of southern New England.

BOSTON ATHENAEUM.

BOSTON ATHENAEUM, of which HOWARD STOCKTON is president, is considered the second largest private library in the country. The last sale of its stock in the Boston stock auctions was of a single share at $840, up $16 from the last previous sale. It is probably the highest-priced non-dividend paying stock in the world, but possession of a share entitles one to the membership privileges, actual cash value of which it would be hard to estimate.

FIGURES

While representing the FOREST HILLS section in the Massachusetts Senate, FRANK SEIBERLICH, chairman of the BOSTON ELECTION COMMISSIONERS, proved himself an adept in solving mathematical problems affecting legislation. His advice was always sought by Republican leaders on election questions. He gained such a widespread reputation for fairness in these matters that MAYOR NICHOLS regards him as a valuable asset in handling the city's election machinery.

NOVELTY.

PROBATION OFFICER M. J. ENEGESS of NEWTON police court is going to have a comparatively easy time of it, in the future, if a plan submitted by the KIWANIS CLUB OF NEWTON materializes. The club is ready to take charge of juveniles who fall afoul of the law and are placed on probation, the plan being to assign each offender to a member of the club, to whom he or she will report periodically, instead of reporting to the probation officer. The idea has appealed to NEWTON judicial officers.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

SHALL A GIRL FOLLOW THE DICTATES OF HER HEAD OR HEART WHEN SHE MARRIES?

Two girls have put that question up to me.

Ellen and Lois are sisters. They are both well educated, pretty representative American girls in their early twenties. They both swim, play tennis, wear bobbed hair and short skirts, read the latest books and talk the sophisticated vernacular of their day.

Lois works in a large insurance office—earns $35 a week—gives her mother $40 a month—and spends the rest on her smart clothes.

Different Ideas.

They both want to marry—and they both have plenty of suitors.

They are both "looking ever" these young men, as maids have done from time immemorial. But now comes the split in opinion.

Ellen is more sentimental than her sister, nor is Lois any more mercenary than Ellen. But they have entirely different ideas of the proper basis for marriage.

Ellen says: "I'll wait until I fall in love. I don't know exactly what sort of a man I want. But I know that my heart will tell me when he comes. Of course, I'll use my head, too. I wouldn't marry a worthless man—and I do hope he'll have enough money, but even if he hasn't I'm going to marry him if I love him."

Lois' Scheme

"You're a sap!" says Lois with sisterly candor. "Of course, it listens lovely, but that stuff's all wet. In the first place, nobody runs in love. You find yourself liking a fellow awfully well, and then it's up to you whether you'll go on with it or not. As for me, I can't see that it's either sensible or loving to go on with an affair that has to end in a poverty-stricken marriage. You'll both be miserable, and nine chances out of ten give a miserable life to your children. If women are going to waste their lives that way, what's the use of all this new educational freedom?

"Now, you can bet I'm not going to scroll my life like that. I know what I need to get along on—and I know, too, how I'd act if I didn't have the decent clothes and good times I've always had. I'm not trying to fool myself, and it's a cinch I'm not going to let any man fool me. So I'm going to wait until the right man comes along with the right amount of money so that we both can be happy. Of course, it isn't always easy. There's Bert—I like Bert a lot. And I'd like to let him hang around and go out with him. I suppose if I did it wouldn't be long before I was head over heels in love with him. But Bert hasn't a cent—so what's the use? So I don't let anything get started."

"I think it's perfectly terrible to marry just for money!" cries Ellen.

"I'm not marrying just for money," retorts Lois. "But I'm not going to start something I can't finish. As a business woman I know I couldn't make good in marriage with a poor man. We'd both hate each other before the honeymoon was over. It wouldn't be honest or fair to marry when I know that about myself. Now, would it?"

So there you are. It's much more than a "lovelorn problem"—it's a discussion which strikes at the very root of our social order. Who is right—who will contribute more to marriage—Ellen or Lois?
